JUDGE ACQUITS BARRISTER RAYNEY OF WIFE'S MURDER

It's the murder trial that has transfixed Western Australia. Last week prominent Perth lawyer Lloyd Rayney was found not guilty of the murder or manslaughter of his wife Corryn Rayney, a Supreme Court registrar, in 2007. In an unusual move, the murder trial was heard by a judge alone, rather than by a judge and jury, due to the intense media attention coming in part from the Rayneys' deep connection with the Perth legal profession.

Damien Carrick: Welcome to the Law Report, Damien Carrick with you. Today, the murder trial that transfixed WA. Last week, prominent Perth lawyer Lloyd Rayney was found not guilty of the murder of his wife Corryn Rayney. Here is Lloyd Rayney speaking on the steps of the court, following his acquittal.

Lloyd Rayney: Despite the best-funded investigation, despite unlimited, apparently, resources at the disposal of those people investigating, this is still unsolved, and that's an extremely hard thing for my family to accept.

Damien Carrick: The murder investigation attracted so much attention that Lloyd Rayney convinced the court to have his trial heard by judge alone rather than by a judge and jury. Lloyd Rayney successfully argued that the unprecedented publicity made it impossible to find an impartial jury. Jo Menagh is a Perth-based reporter with ABC TV and radio. She's covered this extraordinary trial from the beginning, which was presided over by Judge Brian Martin.

Jo Menagh: He found Lloyd Rayney not guilty of the murder of his wife Corryn and also not guilty of the alternative charge of manslaughter of Corryn Rayney, so he was acquitted of everything. The judge found that really the state hadn't proved its case beyond a reasonable doubt, and he even went further to say that the state's case was beset by improbabilities and uncertainties and that parts of it was speculation without any foundation in evidence. So it was a fairly unequivocal acquittal of Lloyd Rayney on all of these charges.

Damien Carrick: Now, tell me about this extraordinary case. This extraordinary couple, Lloyd Patrick Rayney and Corryn Rayney, they were both prominent figures in Perth's legal community.

Jo Menagh: That's right, they were very successful people. Lloyd Rayney was a former senior prosecutor with the Director of Public Prosecutions here in WA. In fact, he reached the position of being the Deputy Director of Public Prosecutions. He went to the bar in about 2003 or so and he was a very successful barrister; represented some of the high profile cases here in WA. His wife Corryn was a Supreme Court registrar, which is really, you know, the equivalent of a Supreme Court judge, so both were very...very successful people, and as you say, very prominent in WA's legal profession.

Damien Carrick: And because his trial involved a deceased and an accused in that legal community, a lot of the participants in the trial had to be brought in from other jurisdictions.

Jo Menagh: That's right. The judge, Justice Brian Martin, the former chief justice of the Northern Territory was brought in to preside over the case, because of course Corryn Rayney worked at the Supreme Court with the other judges who might've been appointed to hear this case, so Justice Brian Martin had to be brought in to preside over the case, but also the case had to be handled by and dealt with by the New South Wales director of public prosecutions because of Lloyd Rayney working at the DPP for many, many years before. So the case was actually taken out of the hands of the WA office of the DPP and handled by the New South Wales office, and John Agius, a prominent Sydney silk was brought over to prosecute the case.

Damien Carrick: Now, we're going to talk about the facts of the case in a moment, but what sort of media attention did this murder investigation and this trial attract in Perth?

Jo Menagh: Well, I've been a journalist for about 20 years and I've probably never seen anything like it. I mean, it was right from the get go when Corryn Rayney disappeared on August 7th 2007. Because she was, I guess, a member of WA's judiciary, the attention then became very intense, because of the job she did, and perhaps a suggestion that, you know, someone had tried to kill her or get rid of her because of a disgruntled decision she'd made, and certainly because also Lloyd Rayney was that successful, prominent barrister. So, right from the beginning it had intense, intense media interest in it.

Now she...her body wasn't found until eight days after she disappeared, and it was found in Kings Park in central Perth, which, I mean, very rarely do you find bodies being buried in Kings Park, but there was a quirk about that, about how it was found, because the person who buried her in that grave site had driven over a bollard at the grave sight and had damaged the car, so the car was only able to drive a few kilometres away and it was dumped in a nearby suburb. It sat there for eight days until someone realised that that was Corryn Rayney's car, and then what led police to her grave was the trail of oil from that damaged car. So if the person who buried her had never driven over that bollard her body might never have been found, because we don't know where her car would've been left, so that was a quirk of fate again that made it incredibly interesting.

Also, a name card with Lloyd Rayney's name on it was found in the vicinity of the grave site, and that was from a chambers dinner; he worked out of one of the chambers here, that was where he had his practice, and that was found near the grave site, which again added another layer to this whole interesting story. Now, in the end the judge found that, you know, that place card was probably just a quirk; you know, a lot of strange things can happen in cases and they have quite innocent explanations, and that's how he described that place card. He said it didn't really have any bearing on whether the state's case to prove that Lloyd Rayney murdered his wife. He just said that it probably had an innocent explanation.

Damien Carrick: Let's go back to the prosecution case. What was the prosecution case in terms of the motive of Lloyd Rayney to kill his wife? What were they alleging?

Jo Menagh: Well, there was evidence that the marriage had broken down, irretrievably broken down, and that there was some animosity between the two. I mean, we heard evidence that Corryn Rayney would send emails to all her family and friends, phone her family and friends and...and really talk about how she wanted to get Lloyd out of the house; she wanted him out, she wanted to take possession of the house, she wanted to live in that house with the couple's two daughters. So the motive was that he wanted to get rid of her. There was evidence also that she had threatened to ruin his career as a successful barrister because he was a gambler. There was also evidence of an affair that he'd had, and she...in certain emails and to statements to family and friends, it said that she was going to make this public and ruin him, and she wanted from him some financial information which she said that she wasn't getting from him, and that included information about work he'd done for Gina Rinehart's Hancock Prospecting. Several hundreds of thousands of dollars he received, and the suggestion was that he was hiding those payments, but the motive was that he wanted to get rid of her because she was going to bring him down, I guess, was the motive, the basic motive that the prosecution said.

Damien Carrick: And because, of course, we're talking about an acrimonious dissolving marriage, even though they're still living under the same roof, in separate bedrooms. There was evidence that he had actually tapped his wife's phone.

Jo Menagh: That's right. Certainly he involved a third person in this, he got a technological expert, if you like, who came in and installed a device that would monitor the home phone of the...at the Rayney home, and prosecutors said that's because he wanted to find out, you know, exactly what Corryn Rayney was doing, what she was up to. And they also said that, you know, because he knew what she was saying to family and friends about bringing him down, if you like, and taking him to the cleaners and describing him as a snake, that's why they said the motivation for him was that he knew that he had to get rid of Corryn Rayney; he had to kill her. I think he argues that it wasn't an illegal bugging, certainly that was what was put to the man who helped him, by the defence counsel, was said that Lloyd Rayney made it plain that he wasn't to do anything illegal, so I think Lloyd Rayney would maintain that he didn't do anything illegal, but he is still facing a charge over that...over this allegation, and that will have to go before a jury at some point, because it's a Commonwealth charge, but a date hasn't yet been set for that trial.

Damien Carrick: Now, what was the prosecution case as to the sequence of events on the night of the 7th of August 2007?

Jo Menagh: Well, it centred on that the couple had agreed to meet. Corryn Rayney had told family and friends that Lloyd Rayney had finally agreed to meet her and hand over the financial information that she'd been waiting for, so she went to a boot scooting class every Tuesday night, so that was where she was last seen alive. She went to a boot scooting class in a nearby suburb, prosecution then says she drove home, and that when she arrived home she was suddenly attacked by Lloyd Rayney who either rendered her unconscious then or killed her. What they alleged was that he then hid her body somewhere, because the younger daughter, who was only ten at the time was asleep upstairs. The other daughter, Caitlyn, was at I think it was a Gwen Stefani concert and was going to be brought home by friends. So in that window of about an hour he's hidden Corryn Rayney's body, hidden her car as well, taken that somewhere else, come back, then Caitlin Rayney has been dropped off by the people who took her to the concert, he asked those people in for a drink, then they've stayed up doing some homework, he stayed up doing some homework with Caitlin, she asked where her mother was and they just said, 'Oh, she hasn't come home yet', and then they say that then after Caitlin went to bed it was alleged that Lloyd Rayney then went and got his wife's body, put it into her car, drove it to Kings Park, buried the body and then of course he's driven over the bollard and the car is damaged, so he has to dump the car in the nearby street, then he walked home, probably a journey of about 90 minutes or an hour or so, going over the Narrows Bridge in Perth, walked home, probably estimated that he got home about 4 am, then he was up again at about 7:30 am to wake his daughters who he took to school and then he arrived at his chambers about eight o'clock and had a meeting with the senior police officer who he was representing at the Corruption and Crime Commission.

That was the scenario that was put, and in the end the judge found that really...that lacked logic, because, you know, to think that someone could've done that, been up all night, if you like, digging a grave, killing someone and then appear, have the demeanour... Nobody noticed anything unusual about him the next morning, the judge found that that just lacked logic and that he didn't...found that that scenario stood up.

Damien Carrick: The judge also found that there were some very serious flaws in the prosecution case. He referred to the physical size and the physical condition of both the accused and the deceased. What was he talking about there?

Jo Menagh: Well, Corryn Rayney was 11 kg heavier than her husband, and from the evidence that we heard in court she was a very feisty woman as well, and that some of the friends said that if anybody was ever going to be involved in an altercation or if there was an altercation between the two that Lloyd Rayney would've been the worst off. He is a very slight man, he's quite short, I think about 170 cm or so, and she was about the same height but eleven kilos heavier, and he...there was also evidence that Lloyd Rayney had a very, very bad back and that he couldn't lift heavy weights or couldn't...simply wouldn't have been able to have dragged his wife's body into the car and dragged it through Kings Park and dragged it into a grave, so the physicality of the two was...it was a very important factor in the trial, and as you say, an important factor in the judge's decision to acquit Mr Rayney.

Damien Carrick: And then there was a question of his demeanour throughout the course of this evening, his daughter being dropped home, the person dropping her off seeing him, his demeanour the following day... There was no evidence that would suggest that he'd just been involved in this exhausting and stressful murder.

Jo Menagh: That's right, no signs of any...like, blisters on his hands, he didn't appear dishevelled in any way, he just appeared his normal, usual self, and that next day he just appeared, everyone—lawyers and the police officer he was representing—just said he appeared totally as normal; there was no sign to suggest that he'd been up all night digging graves. His demeanour changed, however, they said, when about 11 o'clock in that morning he got a call from the Supreme Court to say his wife hadn't come to work and did he know where she was, and that's when his demeanour changed. It was very unusual for her not to come to work, and he realised something was wrong, and that's when we heard that his demeanour changed, but certainly before that there was no sign to support the prosecution's contention that he'd done this.

Damien Carrick: So Jo Menagh, what did the judge find as to where and how Corryn Rayney died?

Jo Menagh: Well, he found that she actually took her last breaths at Kings Park where she was buried, which again tended to undermine the state's case, because they maintained that she was killed at the home. Now, he said it was likely that she was attacked at the home, but...

Damien Carrick: And rendered unconscious?

Jo Menagh: And rendered unconscious, that's right, but he found that it was...it...because of swabs taken from her nasal passages which indicated that there was pollen from Kings Park, that tended to suggest, or did suggest, that she took her last breaths in Kings Park and that she either died before she was buried or she was still alive when she was buried and suffocated when the sand was put on top of her. So that, as I say, tended to undermine the state's case, because their case was that she was murdered at the home, so to find that she took her last breaths at Kings Park was another problem that the state had.

Damien Carrick: And the idea that Lloyd Rayney would have rendered her unconscious, left her at the side of the house while he waited for his daughter to come back from the concert, and it was quite possible that she could've maybe recovered consciousness during that scenario, as laid out by the prosecution...the judge felt that that was pretty implausible.

Jo Menagh: Yes, that's right, he couldn't find that the evidence supported that at all. As he said, the state's case in the end was beset by improbabilities and uncertainties, and that's probably an example of that.

Damien Carrick: What did the judge have to say about the truthfulness or otherwise of the accused, Lloyd Rayney?

Jo Menagh: Well, he did say that he had engaged in some discreditable conduct, and as you say that included the phone tapping, but there was also evidence about some lies that the prosecution said he told after his wife's disappearance and death. He told a barrister friend that he'd driven his wife's car to the chambers dinner from where the place card came, and the evidence was in fact that he drove his other car, which was a late model car that was not at all like his wife's car. The police alleged also that he told them after his wife had disappeared that he couldn't provide them with information about the alarm system at the Rayney home because it was broken, and police and prosecution said that was a lie that showed a consciousness of guilt, if you like. But what the judge...while he did, as I say, find that Lloyd Rayney had engaged in some discreditable conduct, he did say that those sorts of lies that he told, which the prosecution said was indicative of consciousness of guilt, he said that that could also be consistent with an innocent man who's found himself in a terrible traumatic situation where his wife has disappeared and where he is the subject of intense media. So he did say that it could also be seen as being conduct that was consistent with an innocent man.

Damien Carrick: Of course the standard of proof here is proof beyond reasonable doubt. I mean, that's at the heart of a criminal trial, isn't it?

Jo Menagh: Exactly right, and the judge said, you know, there was a lot of suspicious conduct by Mr Rayney, discreditable conduct by Mr Rayney, but in the end that does not prove guilt. He said it falls well short of the standard of proof beyond reasonable doubt, which is of course as you know, the cornerstone of the justice system.

Damien Carrick: Jo Menagh, where to from here? Can the prosecution appeal the decision, and if so on what grounds?

Jo Menagh: Yes, they can lodge an appeal against it. They have 21 days to do that. They would have to find that the judge made an error of law somewhere, and not being a jury trial, they have before them the judge's reasoning, why he's reached this verdict; they have everything before them, so they can go through it with a fine-tooth comb and see if he has made any errors of law. They've got 21 days to do that. Having said that, the judgment is fairly...I mean, he does say at the end that the state case fell well short of proof beyond reasonable doubt, but that is of course for the state to consider. As I've said before, Mr Rayney also has a charge of bugging his wife's phone. That's a Commonwealth charge, and because it's a Commonwealth charge has to go before a jury; it can't be a judge alone trial. And then of course there's also the multi-million dollar defamation action that he started back in 2008, and that stemmed from a senior police officer in a news conference six weeks after Corryn Rayney's death describing Mr Rayney as the prime and only suspect in his wife's murder, and there was evidence at his trial that from then on basically the phone at his chambers stopped ringing overnight, so he...that...if he goes ahead with that action and if he wins he's facing a substantial payout, because as a successful barrister he would've been earning quite a lot of money, and when the phone stopped and his...he says his career was ruined, his reputation was ruined, so if that goes ahead and he wins he probably would receive a substantial payout.

Damien Carrick: Coming back to the murder trial, what did Judge Brian Martin have to say about the police investigation and their attitudes towards Mr Rayney?

Jo Menagh: He said that some of their conduct...it ranged from inappropriate to reprehensible. I guess that stemmed from...we heard the whole issue of that senior officer naming Mr Rayney as the prime suspect was raised, and I guess he did say that that was inappropriate, so...and certainly the whole defence case, or a lot of the defence case, was based on the inappropriateness of the police investigation. Having said that, while Justice Martin did find that some behaviour was inappropriate and reprehensible he also didn't support the theory that other lines of inquiry weren't properly investigated. He said that he was satisfied that all lines of inquiry were investigated by the police. So...but, it certainly...a lot of...does raise a lot of questions for the police and you know, there's calls now for an independent inquiry to examine the investigation into Corryn Rayney's death.

Damien Carrick: Jo Menagh, finally, Judge Brian Martin as he delivered his verdict acknowledged that this is of course a family trying to deal with grief. What comments did he make and why were they so unusual?

Jo Menagh: He singled out Corryn Rayney's father, Ernest Da Silva, who as soon as he was able to he gave...he was the very first witness in the trial, and from then on he sat through every day of the trial, came every day. He singled him out and Brian Martin actually became emotional as he did it, and he said that Ernest Da Silva had conducted himself impeccably and with dignity throughout the trial, and Brian Martin fought back tears as he said to him, 'And for that I thank you.' It was a very emotional moment in the trial, and it's significant also because Corryn Rayney's family is now split, because Ernest Da Silva, her father, and her sister Sharon Coutinho and all her family have been very supportive of the police and the prosecutors who investigated this case, and they would come to court every day accompanied by the detectives. And that of course has caused a split now, because Lloyd Rayney and his two daughters are on the opposite side, of course, because they claim that they have been treated incredibly badly by police. So there is this very sad split in the family now where...and there was evidence of that; the two sides don't see each other; the two Rayney daughters don't see their grandfather at all. Justice Martin acknowledged that those...some people would be distressed with his judgment, but as I said, he singled out Ernest Da Silva and certainly thanked him for what he said was his impeccable conduct.

As we've been hearing, the Lloyd Rayney trial was heard by judge alone. Unusually for a murder trial, there was no jury. Dr Fiona Hanlon is currently researching judge-alone trials like Lloyd Rayney's for the Australasian Institute of Judicial Administration

Fiona Hanlon: Well Damien, in the legislation that applies in Western Australia there's an option in their Criminal Procedure Act for an accused to make application for a judge-alone trial where the accused feels that for whatever reason they will not get a fair trial before a jury, and then it's a matter of a court having to make a decision in the interests of justice whether that application should be supported or not. If the court decides that it is in the interests of justice to have a judge-alone trial then they will order that to happen, and that's how the case will proceed.

Damien Carrick: And what were the arguments in the Rayney case? Presumably the extraordinary publicity?

Fiona Hanlon: It was the extraordinary publicity. It was also to do with the evidence that was going to be presented, that it was technical evidence and there is a lot of argument in the literature that juries don't necessarily deal well with complex evidence. The other aspect was that it was anticipated to be a very long trial, which proved to be correct.

Damien Carrick: Twelve weeks.

Fiona Hanlon: And there is a view that that is almost an unreasonable burden to put on jurors to take that much time out of their private and working lives.

Damien Carrick: There was something like, I think, 100 people testified, something like 700 exhibits were tendered. The trial, even with a judge, lasted for 12 weeks, probably much longer if there had been a jury, and there was a lot of complex forensic evidence.

Fiona Hanlon: A lot of complex forensic evidence, yes.

Damien Carrick: So we've got this system in WA; what are the rules around Australia, are they the same?

Fiona Hanlon: Well, there's a variety of rules around Australia. First of all, we can rule out Victoria, Tasmania and the Northern Territory; judge alone trial in indictable offences is not an option, so there's no model there, in either of those jurisdictions. In South Australia the accused can make the choice, in the ACT, again the accused can make the choice, but only for a range of offences; there's a limited range of offences. The ACT's recently legislated to rule out murder, manslaughter and serious sexual offences from the judge-alone option. And in New South Wales and Queensland it is basically the same sort of model as WA: an interests of justice test on application from the accused or the prosecution.

Damien Carrick: So we've got this smorgasbord around the country.

Fiona Hanlon: We have, we have.

Damien Carrick: What percentage of accused take up the option in the jurisdictions where it's available?

Fiona Hanlon: It's difficult to be precise, because what tends to happen is that courts keep their figures in terms of just trials, and they don't differentiate in public court reports between jury trials and non-jury trials, but some work has been done, unfortunately not up to date, but if you take the period between 2004 and 2008, work that was done then indicated that in the ACT about 56 per cent were, South Australia about 15, New South Wales about 5 per cent and WA about 3 per cent. Now, since then, the ACT has changed the law, because they were concerned that there were too many judge-alone trials; that 56 per cent was one of the triggers for changing the law and restricting the range of offences. So we expect that to drop back. The changes in New South Wales were to free up...there's a view that the change in New South Wales legislation will actually make it easier, potentially, to have a judge-alone trial, so there's an expectation that that figure of 5 per cent has grown and is already a larger percentage, but I can't give you the precise figures.

Damien Carrick: Fiona Hanlon, you've looked at this, who do you think has it right?

Fiona Hanlon: I would choose, if I was being asked to advise on forming a model, and I can't bind the AIJA in saying this, but my view...I think either the South Australian or the ACT model, where it's at the choice of the accused. If you take a view of the right to a jury trial as being a protection for the accused, then I think the most robust model is to allow the accused to make the choice, but if the accused has a feeling that he or she will not receive a fair trial from a jury, let them exercise that right. If you think, as the ACT does, that in the community interests there are some forms of offending that should be subject to jury trial, then legislate for that—as I said, as the ACT has—but it still leaves the choice as the accused. When you get to a model where it's either the prosecution who has a say in the jury mode...in the trial mode, or you have a court having to make the call in the interests of justice, then you get into levels of complication and potentially criticism of the judiciary for making a call on the basis of somehow not respecting the community's right to have a jury system, or being too pro the prosecution or the defence, and I think it's a cleaner, more robust model just to leave it to the defence's call.

Damien Carrick: Well on that point of whether this is advantageous for the prosecution or the defence, what are the figures? What are the conviction rates, the guilty versus not guilty rates of judge-alone versus jury trials?

Fiona Hanlon: Well again, Damien the problem is that we don't have any substantiated public figures—publicly available figures. There's anecdotal material which suggests that judges acquit more often than juries. But that tends to also come from commentators who aren't necessarily pro judge-alone trials. So you're not sure if it's just a selective anecdotal view. There have been some studies in the US about different conviction rates and that research basically comes down to saying that either it depends on the...it can depend on the type of offence. It depends on the evidence involved and that on some view, judges are more likely to convict than juries. And then other parts of the studies will say that depending on the sort of offending, sometimes a judge might be more likely to acquit than a jury. So there's no clear pattern. There's no clear pattern.

Damien Carrick: So in those US studies, what kind of offending is a judge more likely to convict on and what kind of an offending is a jury more likely to acquit on?

Fiona Hanlon: Well there was some suggestions that if it was a more personal sort of offending such as a drink driving related type issue, that juries might be more likely to acquit because they can see themselves more in the shoes of the defence. There's a tendency in the material to say that judges are much more technical about the evidence and where there is a lot of technical evidence the judge will really do that deep analysis of the material and will have...take a tougher view of the evidence and that might come out with an acquittal. Whereas a jury might take a more, 'well, seems reasonable' type...a yes or no type answer to whether someone should be convicted or acquitted. And...

Damien Carrick: Are you saying that the judges are more rigorous?

Fiona Hanlon: Well on that view, yes, the judges are more rigorous. Or on the other view, if you're a pro jury trial what you say is what the jury is doing is putting in a sort of, a community common sense overlay on their decision making.

Damien Carrick: Of course with a jury verdict you never get any sense of what they decide...why they came to the decision that they did. But with a judge-alone trial, as in the Rayney case, we had the judgement—incredibly useful in terms of understanding—and especially the summary as well as the 300 page judgement—the 13 page summary—very very helpful in terms of summarising the evidence and understanding the reasoning upon which the decision was made. That seems to be a very very useful exercise. There seemed to be real advantages or real positives with that.

Fiona Hanlon: Well you're right and that was one of the reasons that influenced the court to authorise the Rayney trial to go as a judge-alone trial because the court said, well there will be a statement of reasons. You don't get reasons for a jury trial because it's thought that those 12 men and women in a jury room will all reach their view but they may reach it on a different basis. So you can't have 12 different sets of reasons. And it's also anonymous, so you don't know who the jurors are.

Now there's a developing argument in the literature that having an unreasoned jury decision—so the lack of a reasoned verdict—is actually becoming more and more contrary to the way other areas of the law are developing. Any decision that affects rights in a ministry of law decision, you're entitled to reasons. It's becoming a view that it is anomalous to have a jury that doesn't give you reasons when it's the most...people say it's the most fundamental impact on your rights. If your liberty's at stake, it's a fundamental impact on your rights, but you may be convicted and not know, not have any reasons.

Damien Carrick: That's paradoxical isn't it? Because on the flip side it's considered a fundamental right to be...

Fiona Hanlon: That's exactly...exactly...

Damien Carrick: ...to have trial by 12 of your peers...

Fiona Hanlon: ...that's right, yes...

Damien Carrick: ...as opposed to a lofty judge.

Fiona Hanlon: So again, if we go back to what we were saying earlier, that's why I would say, leave the call to the accused and leave jury there as a right that the accused can waive. Because otherwise there will be cases where an accused may very well want to have reasons for the decision and then can make the choice...well saying, if I go for a judge-alone trial I will get detailed reasons. If it is something like Rayney where there is detailed forensic evidence of circumstantial case—it's not just a clear call about credibility or is something against community values in terms of the offending; it's a very detailed matrix of evidence—and Rayney got the benefit of a detailed statement of reasons. Where if he'd...go to a jury trial he would have got a yes or no conviction or acquit. And we would never have known what the jury actually did with all that detailed evidence.

When barristers dream, they dream of appearing in a case like the murder trial of former West Australian deputy DPP Lloyd Rayney, charged with killing his wife Corryn, a senior supreme court registrar, who disappeared on August 7, 2007.

The case is dripping in more ironies than a Jackson Pollock painting. In May 1999, Rayney was a deeply ambitious, talented, meticulous prosecutor with the DPP's office, rising to deputy prosecutor when he prosecuted literary star Robert Hughes for two counts of dangerous driving after Hughes had the misfortune of colliding in his rented car with a vehicle containing some grass dealers completing a drugs run up and down the long West Australian coastline. Hughes nearly died, breaking every bone on the right side of his body. Two of the passengers in the other car tried to blackmail Hughes in the weeks after the accident, as he lay delirious in his hospital bed, lingering between life and death. They were convicted of perverting the course of justice.

In May 2000, a Broome magistrate acquitted Hughes at the end of Rayney's case. A jubilant Hughes - on crutches, his bloodstream full of painkillers - made some unflattering and vitriolic remarks about the prosecution and the WA judicial system. Within four months, the chief WA DPP, Robert Cock, successfully appealed against the decision. In New York, the writer who put Australia on the world map with his masterpiece The Fatal Shore, was furious. He told The New York Times they could tow Australia "out to sea and sink it".

To add salt to his wounds, insult to his injuries, Rayney and Cock sued Hughes for defamation in December 2000. It took two years for Hughes's barrister, Mark Trowell, QC, to get the criminal prosecution file transferred from the DPP's office to the independent Crown Solicitor, maintaining that simultaneous civil and criminal proceedings by DPP officers were inappropriate. Hughes, stranded in New York and in poor health, pleaded guilty in absentia to dangerous driving and was fined $2500. The defamation proceedings were settled on very favourable terms to Cock and Rayney. In his biography, Hughes wrote WA justice is to justice what WA culture is to culture.

Corryn Rayney, her marriage to her now privately practising barrister husband in tatters, was vivacious and fun loving, a regular bootscooter in tassels, when she disappeared after a bootscooting session at Bentley Community Centre she had attended for five years. Lloyd, haggard and unshaven, addressed a news conference within a week, saying:

"We are appealing to the public to come forward with any information they may have."

Within days, police discovered her abandoned car - boots inside - in Subiaco. A trail of black treacly oil led into scrubland at Kings Park, where Corryn's body lay buried, upside down, in a freshly dug grave. Prosecutor John Agius alleged this was to hasten the process of decomposition. Lloyd Rayney's place card from a dinner was found in the grass in Kings Park.

In his eulogy at his wife's funeral, he wiped a tear as he recalled "love at first sight" when he spotted Corryn at the Australian Government Solicitor's Office in the late 1980s. Three weeks later, police broke down his door in Como, executing a search warrant for evidence that Rayney was illegally taping his late wife's telephone calls.

He was charged with wire tampering under the Surveillance Services Act. Detective Jack Lee named Rayney as the prime suspect in killing his own wife. Rayney's lawyers issued stinging denials. Lee was transferred to the Pilbara town of Karratha. Rayney went public with his anguish: "It took more than 20 years to build my career and reputation and less than 20 minutes to destroy it."

He sued the police over the statements alleging he was the prime and only suspect.

Rayney was described as an expert in forensic evidence, an accomplished card player who knew every trick in the book. He will need to play every card perfectly against wily prosecutor John Agius. He has a perfect poker face.

Rayney's counsel, David Edwardson, QC, has made some startling early legal manoeuvres. He opted for a judge-alone trial before the identity of the trial judge was revealed. Judge Brian Martin presided over the Snowtown barrel murders case and the Bradley Murdoch trial. He will be judge and jury. Edwardson waived his legal right to open the defence case. Agius has made extraordinary allegations in his opening: growing gambling debts, marital disharmony and infidelity, putting all the Crown cards on the table. Edwardson's cards are very close to his chest.

We don't know if Rayney will give evidence. Rayney gambled on everything from the winners of Dancing with the Stars to the Logie awards and forged a friendship that became sexual with his gambling partner.

The Crown case is a circumstantial case: they must prove it beyond reasonable doubt. The pattern of coincidences must point reliably to guilt and no other hypothesis. As I have said before, coincidence is God's way of remaining anonymous.

The defamation cases have been delayed until after the trial. Hughes could not be blamed for feeling some sense of Schadenfreude.

Everything you ever wanted to know about the 9/11 conspiracy theory in under 5 minutes

TRANSCRIPT: On the morning of September 11, 2001, 19 men armed with boxcutters directed by a man on dialysis in a cave fortress halfway around the world using a satellite phone and a laptop directed the most sophisticated penetration of the most heavily-defended airspace in the world, overpowering the passengers and the military combat-trained pilots on 4 commercial aircraft before flying those planes wildly off course for over an hour without being molested by a single fighter interceptor.

These 19 hijackers, devout religious fundamentalists who liked to drink alcohol, snort cocaine, and live with pink-haired strippers, managed to knock down 3 buildings with 2 planes in New York, while in Washington a pilot who couldn't handle a single engine Cessna was able to fly a 757 in an 8,000 foot descending 270 degree corkscrew turn to come exactly level with the ground, hitting the Pentagon in the budget analyst office where DoD staffers were working on the mystery of the 2.3 trillion dollars that Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld had announced "missing" from the Pentagon's coffers in a press conference the day before, on September 10, 2001.

Luckily, the news anchors knew who did it within minutes, the pundits knew within hours, the Administration knew within the day, and the evidence literally fell into the FBI's lap. But for some reason a bunch of crazy conspiracy theorists demanded an investigation into the greatest attack on American soil in history.

The investigation was delayed, underfunded, set up to fail, a conflict of interest and a cover up from start to finish. It was based on testimony extracted through torture, the records of which were destroyed. It failed to mention the existence of WTC7, Able Danger, Ptech, Sibel Edmonds, OBL and the CIA, and the drills of hijacked aircraft being flown into buildings that were being simulated at the precise same time that those events were actually happening. It was lied to by the Pentagon, the CIA, the Bush Administration and as for Bush and Cheney...well, no one knows what they told it because they testified in secret, off the record, not under oath and behind closed doors. It didn't bother to look at who funded the attacks because that question is of "little practical significance". Still, the 9/11 Commission did brilliantly, answering all of the questions the public had (except most of the victims' family members' questions) and pinned blame on all the people responsible (although no one so much as lost their job), determining the attacks were "a failure of imagination" because "I don't think anyone could envision flying airplanes into buildings " except the Pentagon and FEMA and NORAD and the NRO.

The DIA destroyed 2.5 TB of data on Able Danger, but that's OK because it probably wasn't important.

The SEC destroyed their records on the investigation into the insider trading before the attacks, but that's OK because destroying the records of the largest investigation in SEC history is just part of routine record keeping.

NIST has classified the data that they used for their model of WTC7's collapse, but that's OK because knowing how they made their model of that collapse would "jeopardize public safety".

The FBI has argued that all material related to their investigation of 9/11 should be kept secret from the public, but that's OK because the FBI probably has nothing to hide.

This man never existed, nor is anything he had to say worthy of your attention, and if you say otherwise you are a paranoid conspiracy theorist and deserve to be shunned by all of humanity. Likewise him, him, him, and her. (and her and her and him).

Osama Bin Laden lived in a cave fortress in the hills of Afghanistan, but somehow got away. Then he was hiding out in Tora Bora but somehow got away. Then he lived in Abbottabad for years, taunting the most comprehensive intelligence dragnet employing the most sophisticated technology in the history of the world for 10 years, releasing video after video with complete impunity (and getting younger and younger as he did so), before finally being found in a daring SEAL team raid which wasn't recorded on video, in which he didn't resist or use his wife as a human shield, and in which these crack special forces operatives panicked and killed this unarmed man, supposedly the best source of intelligence about those dastardly terrorists on the planet. Then they dumped his body in the ocean before telling anyone about it. Then a couple dozen of that team's members died in a helicopter crash in Afghanistan. This is the story of 9/11, brought to you by the media which told you the hard truths about JFK and incubator babies and mobile production facilities and the rescue of Jessica Lynch.

If you have any questions about this story...you are a batshit, paranoid, tinfoil, dog-abusing baby-hater and will be reviled by everyone. If you love your country and/or freedom, happiness, rainbows, rock and roll, puppy dogs, apple pie and your grandma, you will never ever express doubts about any part of this story to anyone. Ever.

This has been a public service announcement by: the Friends of the FBI, CIA, NSA, DIA, SEC, MSM, White House, NIST, and the 9/11 Commission. Because Ignorance is Strength.

Watch French, German, Spanish, Italian or Portuguese translations of this video.

EMAILS and all that!

Fredrick Töben's preliminary comments about writing-sending-receiving emails

It is wise to treat All EMAIL exchanges as a public act because variously an email's content becomes public property. Confidentiality can in limited measure be achieved by specifying such in the heading, or by using encryption programs. However, then spy agencies have their existence justified. For me any such communications are thus ON-THE-RECORD and so I have sleepful nights, which was the case even during my imprisonment. If we wish to convince anyone of our depth of commitment to eliciting the TRUTH of a matter - in our specific case the truth-content of Holocaust-Shoah and 9/11 narratives, for example, then we FEARLESSLY need to continue to TRUST our intuition, our moral judgment, our reasoning capacity. This includes the naming of FACTS and the naming of NAMES even if legal injunctions are imposed because as concerned citizens it is our moral, legal and social duty to seek JUSTICE, to speak out against INJUSTICE whenever and wherever we confront it. When an education system blatantly and unashamedly fills its advocated programs with intentional LIES, then it is our DUTY without fear or favour to speak out and to name the facts and to name the INDIVIDUALS who continue to perpetrate such outrageous DECEPTIONS.

If you receive hurtful email comments, then self-reflect and evaluate for truth-content, then also visit your friends who will confirm if you have been stupid and self-deceptive in your judgments.

Here is an email exchange with John Kaminski and others. Then there is the email exchange I had with Alexander Baron about Holocaust and 9/11 – and what motivates believers to hold on to one and not on to the other conspiracy theory – don't get upset now! That's why we're offering another contentious item showing how science and its methods were thrown overboard when the HIV=AIDS hypothesis was legally, NOT scientifically, established. Prof Peter Duesberg is still waiting for the evidence! Now think about the Climate Change hypothesis and how an academic has called for climate change deniers to be assassinated!

The Jews in education

<http://jewishracism.blogspot.com/2008/12/jewish-problem-part-1-jews-in-education.html>

I could go on, but you get the picture. The United States is locked in a 360 degree mindlock of Jewish control. That was as good as the news on this subject is going to get.

Now here comes the bad news. Not even Jewish media can conceal the fact that Israel is killing Palestinian children every day, through indiscriminate bombings and shootings, through delays in and deprivations of medical care.

It is also well known that Israeli soldiers shoot Palestinian children for sport <http://www.zilberhere.com/blog/2001/10/israeli-soldiers-hunting-palestinian.html>.

If this story is true, and I have every reason to believe it is, this the last straw. It is time for all the civilized nations of the world to declare war on

It is also well known that Israelis train American cops in their latest terror and coercion techniques (see above).

It is more than well known that the United States in recent years has suffered an epidemic of senseless public shootings, all blamed on lone nuts.

<http://www.motherjones.com/politics/2012/07/mass-shootings-map>

Now comes the coup de grace. Read this as if your life depended on it, because it does. Millions of people throughout the world have already read this account and reacted with stunned incredulity.

Israel, the notorious Jewish state. And to declare all-out war on Jews everywhere.

Sandy Hook bloodbath: Intelligence analyst

<http://www.presstv.com/detail/2012/12/18/278706/israeli-squads-tied-to-newtown-carnage/>

This story exactly reflects my observations of the Sandy Hook massacre. What bothers me about it (no criticism of the writer) is that it lacks a smoking gun, a certain verifiable fact that proves it is true.

What it does contain is a ton of circumstantial evidence, utterly consistent with the corrupt homicidal behavior Jews have perpetrated upon the world from time immemorial.

It is time for the American people who have anything to do with Israel, Jews or Judaism to be arrested – OR NEUTRALIZED IN ANY WAY POSSIBLE — for treason, mass murder and obstruction of justice. This includes Congress, the executive branch and the judicial branch of the federal government. This includes any politician who has ever taken a dime from any Jewish source.

Because the power structure in America is totally controlled by Jews and Jewish stooges, there can be no resort to "the justice system" — it is totally corrupt and no justice can be found in it.

I don't have to spell out the alternative. The question is — will you defend your own life, now that it is clear that it is systematically being taken from you?

It is time for America to rid itself of this psychotic scourge of Judaism, totally and in any way possible. The Jewish Talmud states that a Jew may kill a non-Jew without penalty and take his property. This is what is happening now. It's way past time to reverse the tractates of the Talmud and inflict it on those who support it.

It is long past time for America and all the nations of the world to rid the world of the psychotic homicidal menace of Judaism, which routinely practices the killing of innocent children for crass political purposes.

According to their holy books and insane rabbis, Jews believe that only they are human beings and the rest of us are animals. Jews have stolen the valuables of every person on this planet through their voodoo economics and poison medicine, through their cynical wars based on lies, through their deliberate invention and release of fatal radiation, and with a thousand other methods.

Who murders children?

Jews do, regularly.

Those children in Connecticut were murdered by an Israeli hit squad, and the cops and the Jewish media are covering it up.

Anyone who defends Judaism defends the reckless murdering of children.

Don't even try to tell me it's not ALL Jews. Anyone who calls themselves a Jew by definition endorses the tenets of the Talmud, which commands its adherents to kill or enslave ALL the non Jewish inhabitants of the planet.

Yes, there are a small fraction of those with Jewish heritage who have renounced the poison of Judaism and work to expose it. A very small fraction. We may spare them from harm, but we may never wholly trust them, no matter how pious their adhesion to other chosen spiritual paths, given the hateful brain training they receive as children which likely may never be completely expunged or transcended.

(Notice how brain training has become a popular new pastime — never participate in it!)

The revolution has begun, worldwide. We're down to kill or be killed. Which choice will you make? Will you let yourself be killed by Jews, as most of you are already doing? Or will you do the sensible thing to protect, if not yourself, at least your children?

"Seems" would be the operative word. I generally regard people who appear on Rense as totally unreliable. Mike's story was so in line with my own thinking that I called him, although we haven't had the long talk yet. I expressed my contempt and mistrust of Duff, and he at least pretended to acknowledge what

I was saying. Then I took Bruce Campbell's word that Duff might be kind of wacko but was trying to do the right thing. Although Harris's story is entirely circumstantial and speculative, I pulled the trigger on it really because of the Jewish track record in false flag mass murders, and because of Darkmoon and John Friend coming out with it, because I wanted to support them (I know, a cowardly reason). But also because I believe Harris has the story right. I was relieved later in the day when Jim Stone had basically the same story.

I know it's still circumstantial, and there's no smoking gun, but it sounds right, in keeping with the Jewish track record. The kids were sold into slavery, they weren't shot.

No, I don't trust Duff. I do trust Campbell, but nobody's right all the time. We do disagree on some assessments, but few. Do I trust Harris? He was supposed to call me back, but didn't. He was supposed to be on Rense tonight with Campbell, but he isn't, apparently. I'd like to trust him, but he does appear on Rense. It's a conflict, no question.

The larger question is the Sandy Hook story being a lie. I'm not sure Harris, Stone, Friend, Darkmoon and myself have it right, but I do know the pigs have it wrong.

Anthony, I've admired a lot of the work you've done. Our major difference stems from the matter of the Talmud infecting the minds of ALL Jews. I stand by my position exactly as stated in that story. Exactly. You should review it, and reexamine your own perceptions.

I don't trust Duff (I think he's crazy), I'd like to trust Harris, I do trust Campbell. I'm not perfect. Just trying to be honest. If you think it's more important to assassinate my character than to get to the bottom of this story, have at it. I don't associate with you because you approve of too many Jews, and as such consider your opinion essentially untrustworthy. A lot of Jews and Jew wannabes have tried before to do what you're doing now; none has been successful. The only reason I have bothered to respond is because I have a high regard for Fredrick, whose name is on this email.

I think your attempt to do this, Anthony, is disgusting, and very much like a Jew. Don't bother trying it again. This is the reason your opinion will never carry any weight with me.

Best wishes,

John K.

Dears — am relaxing in the Queensland heat and humidity, which is a killer...

1. Duff is NOT crazy — he likes his wine, etc. and he is a totally incapacitated veteran of Vietnam but his plan is to save the world for Israel, as he openly stated to me.

2. But then he absorbed all the dissenting voices into VT – he invited me but I declined when I sensed something didn't add up. Ingrid Rimland came on board and was all praises because she felt she now had a wider audience, etc. as if that kind of exposure and popularity meant something. It doesn't to me. She is still set on ratings and popularity and acceptance, something about which I couldn't care less. I appreciate the minimum – one or two valued critics – I count Anthony as one of those.

3. Duff was bent on getting PRESS TV personnel names from me because he was set on making a connections with the station – and now they are falling for it – running his stories - European Jews are now more than ever fleeing from Israel. When I visited Israel in January 1971 I met European Jews who wished to return but didn't have the financial means to get out – poverty was a factor among that group of Jews.

4. Now it seems the second generation European Jews have had enough – and although I don't know how authentic the Thuringia video clip is, that Jews are eying Thuringia with Weimar as their capital in the purely Jewish state in Germany cannot lightly be dismissed.

5. Jewish uninhibited-shameless actions perhaps are now so brazen that this is what they want – who wants to go to Berobijan in Russia's eastern wasteland? German culture and society is, for a parasite, far more interesting and rewarding because Germans can be so obligingly stupid and trusting.

6. I don't trust Darkmoon – I don't trust anonymous sources – unless I have before met them personally, then I accept the need for that kind of behaviour because it does protect on a limited scale. Generally I expect my emails to be read by our national security organisations. Also, Darkmoon makes out it is a she when the tone of the writing suggests to me it is a man – but I could be wrong on that.

7. I don't quite share John's almost inciting-against-Jews attitude because my maxim causes self-reflection and brings a little depth into the quest for truth, etc.: 'Don't only blame the Jews, also blame those that bend to their pressure'. I am far more interested in those non-Jews, those individuals belonging to the majority that work for Jews, etc. In this way the simple scapegoating mechanism is diffused and though very appealing, then catches deeper issues behind the scene. And again this has served me well in my own 17-year legal persecution by Jews – were it not for non-Jewish judges, then there would not have been any legal persecution! That's my mindset, anyway – I go after those that are morally and intellectually bankrupt and who execute Jewish wishes in this worldly pursuit of BATTLE-OF-THE-WILLS.

Kindest for the Christmas and New Year to you, Anthony and John – and keep me posted on your worries, trials and tribulations.

Thanks Fredrick. I envy you the heat. I can't get enough of it, even as I know I am running out of time to get away from the coast. I'm about to get a little bit chillier as a friend and admirer has bought me a really big ticket (plane fare, hotel and $325 admission fee) to the thunderbolts.info Tipping Point 2013 conference in early January in Albuquerque, New Mexico. I am somewhat apoplectic that it was 14 degrees F. there a couple of nights ago, so I'm glad the weather here in Florida has turned a bit cooler to at least get me ready for the shock of it.

Two weeks ago I was having to shuffle around the neighborhood on foot because my car was dead (before a friend and his son fixed it completely for nothing). Next week I'll be hobnobbing in a luxury hotel with the world's foremost maverick physicists and electrical engineers as they discourse on the electric universe.

<http://www.thunderbolts.info/wp/2012/09/02/eu2013-conference-the-tipping-point-2/>

Tom Metzger the superficial white supremacist has evicted one of my websites from where it was parked on his site, so I'm looking for a new home for that, but I had a good, 3-hour interview with Dennis Fetcho on Oracle today, singing the same old tune with a much larger audience marching with me today that I had just a few years back.

So while my existence is precarious, it is rewarding, and mostly I stifle my worry, give thanks for my good luck, and plan on keeping the course I have not varied for the past six or seven years. That I have no real constituency doesn't really worry me because I have the approval and friendship of the most principled people I know, most notably Campbell and Faurisson. I am not a partisan, only an umpire, making do with the things I can perceive and understand. That I have offended obviously well-meaning people like Anthony bothers me some (I've roughed up other nice folks more severely than him), but I feel the more important point to hammer home my principal observations as the only valid way I can see to possibly extricate ourselves from our predicament and neutralize the predators, which necessarily involves no compromise with seekers after partial truths who consort with known maniacs like Duff or sleazeball poseurs like Atzmon. Fortunately, others with keen minds and untroubled consciences endorse what I'm doing.

My attendance at the electric universe conference is a big step in my pursuit of an electromagnetic basis of social perception based on authentic history replacing the pathological framework of corruptible abstract spiritual morality to redirect human society toward a genuinely health future. If I live long enough I think my contribution in this matter can be significant and worthwhile, and that's all any of us can ever ask for.

I hope your surviving your recent (and continuing) travails with a minimum of distress. I think we are to be grateful for it all, just for the chance to make things better.

Best wishes, John K.

By promoting this drivel about 9/11 you are undermining all the good work you've done on World War II. So, Alex Jones and the 9/11 Truth Movement are also controlled by Imperial Zion, or is it just that Jewish mattoids and idiots like Jon Gold are just as dumb as the goyim? My dear Alexander, you miss the point by assuming I parrot stuff. One of the few concrete facts to have emerged from the 9/11 tragedy is a clip where Silverstein stated - '... we decided to pull ...' the Building 7. I have not been able to authenticate this as accurate but if that is so, then we have a major key to the official 9/11 conspiracy narrative. More I cannot say, except of course that the other two buildings were controlled demolition, as authentic engineers have also concluded because their knowledge rests on solid scientific/engineering principles. I don't know whether Dershowitz is a 'shit' or whether there is such a thing as 'Imperial Zion', nor whether there are

'idiots', 'drivel'- 'idiocy' work. Absolute garbage.

Look at the difference. You go to the camps and you see delousing chambers labelled gas chambers; a morgue labelled a gas chamber; typhus epidemics labelled genocide.

Now look at 9/11, you see the hijackers passing through the airport on CCTV, you hear Atta "We have some planes", you actually see the planes crash into the fucking buildings, and then the buildings come down. What more proof do you want?

And don't get taken in by all that crap about Building 7. Do some proper research. Here is something you may understand:

"Some do this in perfect good faith and honesty, and thus unconsciously help the enemies of their cause. Others, no doubt, as the struggle develops, will actually be employed, often unknowingly, by those very clever people, the big Jews, to make wild and foolish attacks upon Jews in general, in order to discredit anti-Semitism." - Sir Oswald Mosley in 1936!

The big Jews used to fear you, that's why they had you thrown in gaol. Now they're laughing at you. And who's fault is that?

1. Building 7, Alexander, is like the Krema I and Krema II matter - the story keeps on changing and the controlled demolition of Building 7 is one of the keys to the official deceptive overarching narrative that leads to Silverstein. You can't huff-and-puff-and-bluff your way out of that one - and even your assumption that I get taken in by 'crap' does not explain why Building 7 came crashing down without a plane hitting it!

2. Quoting Mosley, you use the term 'big Jews', which I consider a childish concept, as is the use of the concept

'garbage' - I fail to see any tight reasoning in such sentences and their information content is almost zero.

3. I don't understand what you are trying to say in those final two sentences - 'fear' - 'gaol' - 'laughing' - what has that to do with Building 7 as one of the lynch pins that explains the 9/11 tragedy as a political 'insider job'?

4. The value system or the mindset that uses such concepts fails to focus on the deeper issues that motivate me to ask probing questions about the information content found within the official 9/11 conspiracy theory's narrative and how it deceptively attempts to explain what happened physically on the ground, in particular how Building 7 was NOT controlled-demolished.

5. Cheers and try again to clarify and explain away Building 7's demise - but without your usual monumental detours into irrelevancies by merely repeating the official conspiracy theory's narrative that a bunch of Arabic-speaking Muslim individuals did 9/11, which is a nonsense but which may soon be sanctioned-protected legally as is the 'Holocaust-Shoah' mythology.

6. As a teacher I would give you a pass mark for effort but I would have to fail you on relevance and coherence grounds.

Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Hi,

I read about your attack on payday lenders, which is noble, but why not go after the real parasites?

Although the people you are chasing lend money at extortionate rates, no one has to borrow from them, and they lend real money, so need to make a decent return. The banks on the other hand create money as figures in a book and then sell it to the government. The biggest con trick of all is so-called quantitative easing. Have you ever wondered why the government and people are so short of money if the banks can create it as figures in a book? It is because they create debt. Furthermore, this debt can be written off; Clinton did it for Africa, and the world did it for Haiti. Check out <http://www.financialreform.info/> and take it from there.

Alexander

1. Yes, you have a funny world view – fractured and somewhat amusing.

2. If you know how unjustly the German law handles individuals who have the courage to think about official narratives of clear-cut physical happenings and that they know are false, then you, too, would challenge such unjust systems because it is our moral and intellectual duty to fight injustices – often perhaps on selfish grounds. Living on a lie erodes basic trust, this then erodes relationships and societies begin to rot, etc. Your journey to the Iranian Holocaust conference in December 2006 was surely prompted by such motives, i.e. to fight and to clarify a bundle of officially proscribed lies.

3. But you know all that...suffice to say in German courts, and now elsewhere, matters of fact surrounding matters 'Holocaust-Shoah' are totally irrelevant because a law states it is illegal to ask questions or to doubt aspects of the official narrative. It doesn't matter whether the event physically happened or not – law is law!

4. It amuses me how individuals accept the official, and often contradictory, narrative of 9/11, and it saddens me that it is accepted by some as an orthodox view when the physical/scientific evidence contradicts it – much like the Holocaust-Shoah narrative. What immediately comes to mind about 9/11 are some extraneous factors that disturb the official narrative, the official conspiracy theory, such as Atta's passport, the missing black boxes, the reason why Silverstein decided to pull Building 7, and most importantly of all the fact that the two towers came down in controlled demolition style. The planes and their purported function in the 9/11 narrative then become irrelevant in any further discussion. Now we want to know who wired the three buildings for a controlled demolition. To date it's all speculation, save for Building 7 because Silverstein admitted he decided to 'pull' the building down.

5. And now the latest pattern of oppression follows on from Holocaust and 9/11 – Global Warming:

Have a view of 'Austrian Prof: global warming deniers should be sentenced to death'.

The big difference as I pointed out in my article that was too hot for both Bradley Smith and someone else I won't name is that it is NOT illegal to question 9/11, indeed it is healthy. It is also healthy to question the loonies who denounce the official narrative simply because it is the official one.

The official narrative is also that Michael Jackson is dead, that Neil Armstrong walked on the Moon and that drinking too much alcohol can get you drunk or even kill you. How far do you want to take this nonsense?

As for below, the mere fact that you would parrot this nonsense about Larry Silverstein proves only that you have done no research WHATSOEVER on 9/11, you are simply parroting conspiracy cranks. All the credible evidence, all of it, supports the official narrative that 19 men armed with boxcutters perpetrated 9/11. How the Bush Administration exploited that and how Zionist wirepullers in high places covered up the truth (ie the professed motives of Atta and co) is also a matter of record.

Check out some of the real facts about 9/11 before you make an even bigger fool of yourself. Start here:

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KCniHhzAIZM>

Please don't send me anymore of this nonsense until you have seen reason. You're not putting your freedom on the line by pushing this 9/11 "truth" nonsense, you are jeopardising both your own reputation and the good name of Holocaust Revisionism as a dissident historical discipline.

4. It amuses me how individuals accept the official, and often contradictory, narrative of 9/11, and it saddens me that it is accepted by some as an orthodox view when the physical/scientific evidence contradicts it – much like the Holocaust-Shoah narrative. Subject: RE: Fighting official conspiracy theories - and more musings for a HAPPY 2013

Please note this email has been sent through Fredrick Töben's list – if you wish to be taken off this list, please advise – forthwith!

1. Your harsh tone, Alexander, indicates a confusion and a lack of focus as is suggested by your use of the concepts 'loonies', 'reputation and good name', which to me deflect from the nitty-gritty of things and introduces the aspect of shouting/threatening individuals into silence, i.e. it works with those who still respond to such rhetorical trickery. Perhaps you could also be describing yourself here as someone who believes in his own propaganda! If you evaluate your writings as 'too hot' for individuals, then there is another explanation available as to why the article was rejected: the premise on which you rested the whole screed was not convincingly but confusingly presented.

2. The fact that you are running with the official 9/11 conspiracy narrative – that a bunch of Arabic-speaking hijackers perpetrated the act – but that you reject the official Holocaust narrative indicates to more discerning and wiser minds that you have as yet not connected the common dots, and this is how I read Bradley Smith's comment justifying his rejection of your article. In any case, I do not deserve the attention you have given me in the article and perhaps you should try bringing in the heavies of Revisionism – Butz, Faurisson, Rudolf, Graf, Mattogno, Kues, Zündel, et al.

3. In this battle-of-the-wills exercise I do not label individuals who express their beliefs and opinions as 'loonies' or other such derogatory names because that does not help to clarify the issues at hand.

4. Also, because I am firmly fixed in the physical as well as in the metaphysical world I try to balance the two by looking for discrepancies in what is offered as an explanation for some physical event – such as the official narrative, i.e. the 9/11 enquiry report. I also have about 120 flying hours in small planes and am thus conversant with natural forces that I have no control over but that I embrace and utilise with a man-made object. I am thus aware of my physical and mental limitations whenever I interact with Nature, and I much respect Nature's firm limitations imposed upon my activities. For example, those pushing the Global Warming ideology are furious when suggestions are made that their alarmist endeavours need to be scrutinised for factual truth content and not merely rely only upon computer modelling.

5. I have not had an opportunity of confronting Larry Silverstein and to probe his significant comment about having pulled Building 7, and so I accept it at face value. But your below comment about the issue does not assist in clarifying, let alone in explaining, who wired Building 7 for controlled demolition. This event is like the Krema II function at Auschwitz-Birkenau and remains quite critical for understanding the overarching explanation made: gassing-extermination and planes-terrorism.

6. You mention the Bush administration/Zionist wirepullers 'in high places' exploiting Atta's professed motives being on the record – but that's the official conspiracy narrative, which I reject especially because of its nonsense claims in particular the 'discovery' of Atta's passport. It is so reminiscent of the 'Holocaust-Shoah' survivor stories that when you look closer at the physical evidence most of them disintegrate into mere puffery. I recall the nonsense claim that Osama Bin Laden was killed last year when in fact this myth had to be abandoned on account of its obvious fabrication. Think of the WMD, the Kuwaiti incubator story, etc. Faurisson reminds us how the 'Holocaust' story keeps on changing directly proportional to Revisionist breakthroughs. Then important facts disappear, for example, in 1996 the de-commissioning of Krema I as a homicidal gas chamber, then the removal after the 1988 Zündel Toronto trial of the 20 plaques that mentioned the 4 million deaths. This is happening with 9/11 as well, for example the official narrative has dropped the discovery of a car containing an Arabic flight instruction manual and a Koran.

7. I don't understand your use of the concept 'high places'. For me there are no 'low' or 'high places' and I reject the class system as a false consciousness proposition that has no value in explaining matters, certainly not anything in Holocaust or 9/11. For example, I know a history lecturer at The University of Adelaide who intimidates students – those who let themselves be intimidated – by blocking certain questions concerning the official Holocaust-Shoah conspiracy theory, i.e. that Germans did bad things to Jews. He focuses on a transgressing student with a fierce look, then states: 'Your question borders on the offensive!' I am pleased to see that you have not yet reached this stage re 9/11 but you certainly have reached Schopenhauer's first stage of ridicule. Shall I await your next email expecting a tongue-lashing from you?

8. I like the candles and flowers as a backdrop to Chris Mohr's exposition of the official conspiracy theory that controlled demolition didn't cause the three buildings to collapse – <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=KCniHhZAIzM>. What he presents is not convincing and reminds me of how homicidal gassing advocates realized that The Rudolf Report needed to be suppressed on account of its supporting and explaining natural scientific processes. If you compare controlled demolitions with the demolition of the three buildings, then no amount of verbiage – the overarching narrative – will blind even the non-scientist as to what happened. Remember how the Scholastics got bogged down philosophically when they tried to account for the relationship between the particular and the universal by postulating a problem: How many angels fit on a pin-head?

9. Perhaps in time 9/11 matters will face the evil forces of censorship as is a fact with matters Holocaust-Shoah, or ridicule as in <http://www.corbettreport.com/911-a-conspiracy-theory/>.

Didn't Schopenhauer remind us how truth emerges in three phases: first it is ridiculed, then it is violently opposed, and finally it is accepted as a given?

10. So my dear Alexander, it looks as if you and I have a different view on the physical happenings of 9/11 and its official conspiracy theory – the overarching narrative - that set the new dialectic for global governance, namely it replaced the worn-out Capitalism versus Communism dialectic with Capitalism/democracy/freedom versus Terrorism/Islam/Muslims/Arabs.

Fredrick Töben

Adelaide – 4 January 2013 -

a. currently in Australia's northern sweltering sunshine, and fearing global warming is upon us – until the next change in the weather, which I predict will drop temperatures as well. I assume you did view Prof. Richard Parncutt: Death Penalty for Global Warming Deniers?

b. Revisionists have had such threats made against them and only two days ago Günter Deckert began another 5 months prison term at Mannheim because he refuses to believe in the rubbish that's contained in the official Holocaust-Shoah narrative, and he continues to ask questions.

c. By the way, 'Holocaust' will now compulsorily be taught in Australian schools – New South Wales. That such courses are highly offensive because they teach hatred of Germans is never addressed. Claiming it was the evil Nazis and not the Germans who did the evil deeds is a ruse that enables Germans to feed their pathological guilt complex and continue to distance themselves from this important period of distorted history without understanding what happened and thereby leaving it to the falsifiers of historical records, again much like the 9/11 official conspiracy narrative. Just look at the individuals who support it and you will understand why they support it.

d. It is much like those who claim Zionists are not Jews, then criticise Israel, for whatever reason, which is a Jewish state. This gives Jews and their supporters a chance to extricate themselves from the failed Zionist project called Israel. That this defence is also breaking down is a result, among other things, of truth emerging about how Israel was created. Hence the defenders of Israel are more than ever using the sword of 'antisemitism' and 'racism' to deflect legitimate criticism of this state. But again bearing Schopenhauer in mind the frenzy of name-calling will escalate until the world will appear to be full of 'xenophobes', 'antisemites', 'racists' and 'Holocaust deniers', and draconian legal and social and economic oppression will need to be implemented, i.e. if Israel is to survive as a European colonial enclave in the Middle East.

e. Just the other day the claim that most Germans are 'secret antisemites' was made by "Tenenbom (who) runs a Jewish theatre company in New York and writes columns for German, Italian and Israeli newspapers ...'In 1945 it was reduced to ashes, it was nothing, and Germany built itself all the way to the top today, it's the strongest, richest country in Europe. And my hope is that Germany will rebuild itself also mentally on the issue of anti-Semitism and that from Germany will come the light unto the nations.'"

f. Recently in the news from Greece we witnessed the bizarre spectacle where protesters dressed up in 'Nazi' uniforms to show their contempt for German chancellor Angela Merkel who is anything but a real German in sentiment. So, Germans need to learn the lesson George Kausch postulates in his book: Die unbequeme Nation: 2000 Jahre Wirtschafts- und Religionskrieg gegen die Deutschen wherein he traces the history of the Germanic-Teutonic mindset and where basic values of fearlessness, cleanliness, honesty and hard work oppose the economic and religious wars with which Germans have had to contend over these past two thousand years. In this context the 'Holocaust-Shoah' mythology is ideally suited to castrate the German mind through an artificial-propaganda trick called 'Holocaust-Shoah'.

I am reminded of what Judge Wilhelm Stäglich said when watered-down defamation laws were adapted and used to construct specific 'Holocaust' laws designed to protect the official narrative that Germans during World War Two systematically state-sponsored the extermination of six million European Jews in homicidal gas chambers: 'If only as hundred judges refused to implement the new laws that criminalised questioning the official Holocaust-Shoah narrative, then the imprisonment of dissenters would stop'.

Unfortunately, to date the law continues to imprison those who 'defame the memory of the dead'; but mind you, only the memory of dead Jews while others are conveniently forgotten. A nation that does not honour its dead is dead.

g. I wonder how much truth-content is in the following item about Jews seeking to colonise the German state of Thüringen with the aim of making Germany's classic cultural city of Weimar its capital: <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fgmsL6zSldg> . This will cause consternation among Germans who refuse to submit to barbaric genital mutilation-circumcision-child abuse and kosher slaughter, among other things, such as the use of the Talmudic-Marxist death/slave dialectic as opposed to the Hegelian life-giving dialectic. It is on these grounds that I concur with Lady Michele Renouf and her call that Jews re-settle in their Russian homeland of Birobidzhan – the Jewish Autonomous Oblast - where they are free to impose their value system on their own kind. If Jews live as a minority in any country, then it is their duty to do in Rome as the Romans do, and not undermine the social-legal-economic-financial fabric through hypocritical human rights legislation whereby they gain the upper hand through the host letting itself be corrupted. Although faced with much criticism over it I still maintain my maxim is valid: 'Don't only blame the Jews, blame those that bend to their pressure'.

h. But talking about truth as an absolute value reminds me of the latest revelation about Jewish life in Ancient Persia. Now that modern Israel didn't reveal its hidden mysteries confirming ancient Jewish life in the Holy Land, there is a new discovery – and it explains why Taliban needed to be subdued, why death and destruction had to be inflicted on the peoples of the Middle East and beyond! - <http://www.timesofisrael.com/national-library-unveils-trove-of-medieval-manuscripts-uncovered-in-taliban-caves/>.

Perhaps Osama Bin Laden was hiding more Jewish treasures.... Such is the sadness of those who are seeking a physical identity when their mental one is fabricated and cannot stand the truth-test! Will the Afghans and Iranians now be made to pay their 'Holocaust-Shoah' tax as have the Germans for decades? No wonder the fragility of Jewish life can be so easily offended and their life's appreciation diminished when the truth-test is applied to their fanciful assertions and claims of suffering and of their self-claimed superiority, i.e. chosen by God. What a cheek! No wonder Jews feign hurt feelings and accuse others of hatred when they themselves are the haters, as in my case - Jeremy Jones, Steven Lewis, Robert Goot, Steven Rothman, Peter Wertheim, et al. No wonder they were out to bankrupt me and to stop me from functioning, which they did on 24 September 2012. But this will not stop the disintegration of the Jewish entity of Israel, and then this entity is claiming Iran is destabilising the Middle East when in fact it is doing the war mongering on account of being a foreign growth within the Middle East - <http://www.timesofisrael.com/iran-has-not-yet-crossed-red-line-pm-tells-ambassadors/>.

i. And while I am at it, I ask the question: Why won't they let him rest? Who is HIM? Yes, of course it is Adolf Hitler, the man who dared stand up to the power structures on whose coattails Jewish interest manifested itself. Sadly Palestinian and Middle Eastern politicians have had their minds perverted whenever they equate ZIONISM = NAZISM. A huge difference exists between these two political systems, and the main ones I mentioned above concern National Socialism: no genital mutilation-circumcision, no kosher slaughter, no international predatory capitalism at the expense of national interests, upholding moral values such as truth-telling, cleanliness-hard work, and celebrating the basic family unit as an essential of any healthy society. Adolf was after national uplifting while the internationalists are after exploitation, then seeking refuge from justified retribution. No-one wishes to be robbed of their own wealth and treasures.

<http://www.timesofisrael.com/for-mer-jewish-neighbor-of-hitler-writes-memoir/>.

I have reached the point where I view individuals who defame Adolf Hitler as either being ignorant of the facts, lying or both. Of course, I make the same claim about matters 'Holocaust-Shoah' – those who claim truth-content and seek to anchor it in legal concrete are either ignorant of the physical facts, lying or both. It's as simple as that!

j. Finally, Alexander, I note that since 9/11 the average American has become quiet when overseas, noticeably subdued, and this reminds me of a nation dying, as was East Germany and the Soviet Union and its dependencies that I visited during the 1970s: the people's soul had been enslaved by the ideology of Marxist dialectic materialism, which we have re-badged and now call 'freedom and democracy' – citizens under the Marxist-Talmudic yoke had become the walking dead. So, too, it will be with the New World Order that is crystallising itself before our very eyes where the added impact of predatory capitalism is killing body, mind and soul, and where repression will be the order of the day.

What follows is graphic in its detail and spot-on in its choice available to us. The US economy is having problems and the following lessons put things into perspective. I note that your writings on this topic are always lucid, which I appreciate, but let me say that your 9/11 embrace is pure folly:

Lesson # 1:

*U.S. Tax revenue: $2,170,000,000,000

*Fed budget: $3,820,000,000,000

*New debt: $1,650,000,000,000

*National debt:$14,271,000,000,000

*Recent budget cuts: $38,500,000,000

Let's now remove eight zeros and pretend it's a household budget:

*Annual family income: $21,700

*Money the family spent: $38,200

*New debt on the credit card: $16,500

*Outstanding balance on the credit card: $142,710

*Total budget cuts so far: $38.50

Lesson # 2:

Here's another way to look at the Debt Ceiling: Let's say, you come home from work and find there has been a sewer backup in your neighbourhood....and your home has sewage all the way up to your ceilings. What do you think you should doraise the ceilings or remove the shit?

If you don't accept all their lunatic claims about this grand conspiracy you must be part of it.

I will just take two points - Silverstein. That claim is too silly for words. Check out the truth about Building 7.

"6. You mention the Bush administration/Zionist wirepullers 'in high places' exploiting Atta's professed motives being on the record – but that's the official conspiracy narrative"

No, it is not! They went out of their way not to mention Palestine.

Really, do your homework and you will see the sheer impossibility of the claims of the misnamed Truthers.

theories - and more musings for a HAPPY 2013
Alexander -
1. You miss the point and do not seem to know much about controlled demolitions - no buildings self-implode, with jet-fuel at that! Hence the Silverstein claim is valid - until you can get him to retract it. But then you still have to explain to the world how Building 7 collapsed when it was not hit by a plane. There was a suggestion that some office papers fuelled the flames - yes, someone seriously made this claim.
2. I am amazed how your whole world view is shaking and fracturing by having to face up to this huge official conspiracy theory - and the parallels with Holocaust-Auschwitz lies are striking where the story changes as the physical facts are exposed.
3. You do not seem to know much about the complexities involving global dialectic processes that establish world dogmas, which themselves may be 'idiocies' but the enquiring process that attempts to explain them certainly is not.
4. I note you are already beginning to sound like those individuals who predicted my bankruptcy, i.e. attacking the person rather than the argument offered. By using terms such as 'idiocy' and 'their lunatic claims' you are merely huffing-and-puffing and venting your frustrations perhaps because you are being challenged - remember, this is also the Holocaust believers' problem: you embrace a belief, then you find it's been a lie. So, what do you do? Admit you have believed in a lie for decades" Some can't handle it and become abusive and so shoot the messenger and then continue to scapegoat those who bring the factual information that explains accurately what happened. i.e. the three buildings were brought down by controlled demolition, and during World War Two Germans did not do any homicidal gassings. Both incidents would contravene basic physical laws of nature - and so, Alexander, your own conspiracy theory collapses, i.e. that a bunch of Arabic-speaking men conspired to do 9/11. Notice how you now have become a conspiracy 'nut' defending your own conspiracy theory that has government/legal protection!
Cheers and good luck with your endeavours in protecting the official conspiracy theory of 9/11.

Good to hear from you.
Anyone that sends you a video that contains (@2:25) a statement such as "In 1993 there was a terrorist bombing of the World Trade Center" is, quite frankly, a waste of your time.*
What's clear from this rambling, babbling, Angel-at-the-Fence arm-waver is that he has probably never been to my hometown of NYC, and he certainly was never been in ANY of the WTC buildings - and he, and his manicured/pedicured friends, certainly never made a living in structural steel (such as yours truly).
Let me go about it this way . . . in 1973 while working on the construction of West Point Military Academy 'Cadet Activities Center' (aka Eisenhower Hall) I was party to discussions involving the use of small nuclear devices. These were BRIEFLY discussed for some of the more time-consuming and difficult Hudson River bluff excavations (solid granite). The devices were known to exist, and were a technical result of Operation Plowshare. When the locals in Highland Falls, NY got wind of the mere discussion; well . . . that was that (as they say).
In other words, Richard Gage, who I know personally, is correct about the evidence he is focused upon, but not completely correct in his conclusion; especially regarding the sub-basements. The guy in the video is also a waste of time.
Paul
* When I discussed the DETAILS of this item with the "famous" prosecutor of Lee Harvey Oswald, Mr. Vincent Bugliosi, he decided to end our "conversation." I was requesting, given his overwhelming accomplishment of prosecuting a dead guy, that he prosecute a person your new Angel-at-the-Fence arm-waver type friends were claiming, at that point, was alive. See: http://links.veronicachapman.com/OBLNoHardEvidence-Ithaca_Journal.pdf
Perhaps, given that latter "was alive" tidbit, I was premature with Vince?!

But more specifically, this new Angel-at-the-Fence arm-waver babbles "dissident historical discipline"? Okay . . . well . . . my EXACT footnote 's' of 15Sep2008 to Vince is cut-n-pasted here:

[1]" [s] In 1993 current Homeland Security czar Michael Chertoff was defense lawyer for Magdy El-Amir in the case of The State of New Jersey vs. American Preferred Provider Plan (APPP). El-Amir's APPP was caught siphoning-off Medicaid funds to terrorist organizations. Evidence proved that El-Amir had financed the blind sheikh Omar Abdel-Rahman, the alleged mastermind of the 1993 van bombing of the WTC. El-Amir was also the focus of the FBI sting called Operation Diamondback which investigated weapons sales to Osama bin Laden. Chertoff had successfully shielded El-Amir from indictment, who was later granted safe passage to Egypt. The presiding judge in the case against El-Amir was Michael Mukasey, now the head of the DOJ, the current U.S. Attorney General. See Big Wedding: 9/11, the Whistle-Blowers and the Cover-up. it's only a cartoon but it shows how ludicrous your claims are.

The other big difference between this garbage and Holocaust Revisionism is that in order to supplant the official narrative you need not simply to nitpick but to supply a better paradigm, which the Revisionists have done.

When you have done this, supplied:

the plan

the budget

how the hijackers were recruited who planted these non-existent explosives and a lot more besides, then you will have something to offer.

Your bloke Sault is a total nutter, and the sort Organised Jewry love because they can smear you with guilt by association. You, but not me. Now please, no more. Life is too short and currently I have a massive project to complete:

No need to get stupid with your comments-musings, Alexander, but face the facts.

I go with Balzac - >>>In the first half of the 19th Century, Honoré de Balzac (1799-1850) pointed out that there are two kinds of world history. One is official, falsified and designed to be taught in the schools, while the other is the real and secret history that accurately depicts world events. Balzac's appraisal illuminates the fact there have always been powerful groups that direct politics from behind the scenes and make certain that the great majority are kept ignorant of their machinations. When truth-seekers present evidence of deception and bring the true story to light, they are dismissed as "conspiracy theorists" who are not to be taken seriously - and they are always persecuted in one way or another.<< Fredrick

What do we really know about AIDS?

News Weekly, September 11, 1993

Is AIDS caused by a virus known as HIV? The early and continuing consensus among medical scientists is that indeed it is. However, a small but growing group of specialists believes that this consensus was premature, and that the HIV-AIDS link is not as clear cut as first believed. These dissenters count among their numbers some of America's leading scientists. They are not unanimous in anything except the belief that the HIV-AIDS link has as yet to be properly established. In fact, their opinions on what causes AIDS vary widely. Some believe that HIV is implicated but does not act on its own; others such as Dr Peter Duisberg, the Professor of Molecular Biology at the University of California — and the most well-known of the dissenters — believes that HIV is simply a marker of high-risk behaviour, that it is basically harmless, that it has been present in human populations for eons, and that AIDS is probably the result of the frenzied sexual activity and accompanying drug-taking which characterised the homosexual 'bathhouse scene' over the past two decades. He argues that anal intercourse, rampant venereal disease (and consequent taking of huge and continued doses of antibiotics), the use of carcinogenic and mutagenic drugs to improve sexual performance, and the widespread abuse of narcotics all will lead to a suppression of the immune-system. Moreover, the powerful drug AZT provides to assist sufferers, is actually 'AIDS by prescription'. News Weekly is not endorsing the views of these dissenters because it is not a specialist scientific magazine with the biomedical expertise to weigh the evidence. However, it is familiar with what has happened to anyone who has deviated from the 'orthodox' view of AIDS enunciated by governments in thrall to the AIDS lobby. As FREDRICK TÖBEN Ph D, here argues, if AIDS is to be beaten, then a return to objective scientific methods is indispensable. The Media assumes that HIV causes AIDS. There's no reason for them to accept this hypothesis because scientific research as early as 1983 'established' this link. French scientist Luc Montagnier reported his discoveries during 1983, and in early 1984, US scientist Robert Gallo reached the same conclusion. In March 1985, the first test to detect the 'AIDS virus' in human blood became available. Besides screening blood for HIV, authorities all over the world began to launch massive sex-health campaigns. Safe sex, in the form of a condom, and needles sterilisation programs began to consume millions of dollars. Predictions based on the HIV-AIDS theory were also made. By the end of the century — so the experts said — AIDS would not only decimate the homosexual communities but also devastate mainstream heterosexual societies. These wild predictions have so far not come to pass.

While governments, under the sway of the vociferous AIDS lobby, spent millions on AIDS prevention programs, a number of scientists — in truly scientific enquiry style — began to question the validity of the prevailing HIV-AIDS hypothesis. In 1992, this small group of scientists wished to have the following four-sentence letter published in a number of prominent scientific journals:

It is widely believed by the general public that a retrovirus called HIV causes the group of diseases called AIDS. Many biomedical scientists now question this hypothesis. We propose that a thorough reappraisal of the existing evidence for an against this hypothesis be conducted by a suitable independent group. We further propose that critical epidemiological studies be devised and undertaken.

Not a single reputable journal accepted this letter for publication. And so was born 'The Group for the Scientific Reappraisal of the HIV/AIDS Hypothesis', now consisting of over 100 scientists and activists and writers around the world.

When in May 1992, ABC-TV's Lateline informed Australia of this group's activities, it was ironic that its spokesperson, Dr Charles Thomas, appeared in voice only. The satellite link-up could not be made to Keystone studio because a door key had been lost. Dr Thomas, a member of the executive committee of The Group, is a molecular biologist and virologist who heads the Helicon Foundation at San Diego, California. he is also a former professor at Harvard and Johns Hopkins universities.

In an interview with the editors of Heterodoxy, Dr Thomas claimed that the anti-AIDS drug, AZT, actually causes AIDS because "DNA synthesis and cell division are essential to mount an immune response. AZT kills replicating cells. AZT in a sense can be a cause of AIDS diseases. The patient loses hair and the proliferating intestinal epithelia are destroyed."

As early as March 1987, AZT was approved by both US and Australian health authorities as an effective anti-AIDS drug. As there are over 20 illnesses covered by the acronym AIDS, it is understandable that AZT was hailed as a major break-through in treating AIDS sufferers.

To this claim that AZT kills HIV, Dr Thomas says: "AZT kills any bit of DNA that tries to replicate. it is a crazy way to try to kill the HIV virus ... Besides, where is the evidence that the incorporated virus is doing any harm at all? Yet Burroughs-Wellcome's figures [the manufacturers of AZT] indicate that 200,000 people world-wide receive AZT every day at a cost of US$2300 [per person per years]".

Popular press reports continue to refer to HIV as the AIDS-causing virus, despite the well-known fact that there are AIDS-sufferers with no HIV in their bodies.

INFECTION

Proponents of anal sex remain silent about the fact that semen in the rectum, often accompanied by tissue tearing, is an ideal breeding ground for infections. Therefore a person whose body already suffers from drug toxicity will have difficulty fighting additional infections within the anal passage. The normal immune system begins to suffer from overload leading to its total shut-down.

Dr Peter Duesberg, Professor of Molecular Biology, University of California, is a member of the National Academy of Science and an executive, member of The Group. He has been questioning the validity of the HIV-AIDS hypothesis since early 1987. Duesberg finds it "surprising that AIDS epidemiologists prefer the 'enigmatic mechanism of HIV pathogenesis to AIDS' over the straightforward chemical drug toxicity". He claims that "the 10 years of recreational drug use that is necessary to cause AIDS is a rational explanation for what is claimed to be the 10 year latent period of HIV by the proponents of the HIV-AIDS hypothesis".

Duesberg has been severely criticised for holding the drugs-AIDS hypothesis. The 'true believers' see Duesberg as a dangerous man whose views are undermining the safe-sex and clean needles campaigns.

In a recent issue of Nature there appears an article by Michael Ascher, et al., which specifically refutes Duesberg's claims about recreational use of drugs causing AIDS. Although the article mentions Duesberg by name 19 times, Nature has to date refused to give him right of reply. Worse still, its editorial of May 13, written by its editor Sir John Maddox, is titled 'Has Duesberg the right of reply?' The editorial then goes on to justify its censorship of Duesberg's view. Here are the first two paragraphs of Duesberg's response which Nature refuses to publish:

Asher, et al., challenge my hypothesis that injected and orally consumed recreational drugs and AZT cause AIDS. Based on a one-time enquiry about the use of marijuana, nitrate inhalants, cocaine and amphetamines 'for the 24 month period before entry into the study' of mostly homosexual men from San Francisco, they claim the incidence of AIDS diseases over 8 years is independent of drugs.

However, their study is worthless for a scientific appraisal of the drug-AIDS hypothesis, because it fails i) to study the AIDS risk of HIV-positive, drug-free controls; ii) to quantify recreational drug use; iii) to observe drug use long enough to detect toxicity; and iv) to report AZT use altogether.

It seems that Duesberg's claims deserve airing. I view such censorship of scientific debate with trepidation. But then 'politically correct' forces aiming to stifle open debate on numerous topics are alive and well.

Soon light will be shed on the truth content of the 'politically incorrect' Duesberg drug-AIDS hypothesis. In England, a woman is suing the British manufacturer of AZT in the belief that the drug killed her haemophiliac husband.

How sad, though, for the scientific ideal of open enquiry, when the legal system has to make scientific decisions.

Fredrick Töben Comments 28 February 2007:

Amazingly, Dr Peter Duesberg was not called as a witness. He could have assisted the imprisoned Andre Parenzee with the argument that HIV is not the only factor influencing the development of AIDS. According to his mother, Andre Parenzee has been off AZT for a year and is feeling much better, much like US basketball star Magic Johnson who cracked the code when he went off AZT and recovered — leading to AIDS proponents concluding that HIV is so clever that it wards off any attack by changing its substantive nature. This caused the admission by HIV believers that a person may have HIV and be quite fine — without treatment! Parenzee also refused to have a blood test and, according to David Brockschmidt, public court records of the day did not list the matter for a hearing. Something does not quite add up here — but we are not able to follow this any further because of our own matter in the Federal Court of Australia.
