Sylvia Stolz talks about 'Holocaust Denial', Nuremberg trials, her trials, and 'Goodness, Truth, and Beauty', something PRIME UGLIES loathe discussing.

During the conference this German lawyer stated that the Holocaust had never been proven in court as it would have lacked the findings of the crime scenes and killing methods and the number of deaths, perpetrators, corpses or traces of a murder. She also stated that there is no 'testimony, documents or other evidence' needed in a normal court of law to prove the 'Holocaust believers' official conspiracy narrative that during World War Two Germans exterminated Jews in homicidal gas chambers. Sylvia clearly revealed her moral value system: 'To think what is true, to sense what is beautiful and to want what is good, hereby the spirit finds the purpose of a life in reason.'

Hitler's house may become office of Austrian charity

2:58p.m. EST January 30, 2013

VIENNA (AP) — An Austrian charity that helps immigrants reportedly plans to set up an office in the house where Adolf Hitler was born. The villa in the Upper Austrian town of Braunau has been empty for more than a year since a workshop for the mentally disabled moved out. A Russian parliamentarian threatened last year to buy and raze it — a plan doomed to fail as the building is under historical protection because of its Renaissance origins. The Kurier, a mainstream newspaper, in its Thursday edition cited unnamed officials of the Interior Ministry, which now leases the house, as being open to subletting to the Volkshilfe charitable organization.

The charity's head, Karl Osterberger, says that renting the house to an agency like his would send a "great signal."

What is happening in the Middle East where Zionist supremacism is rearing its ugly impulses?

Ex-Iranian diplomat warns Israel: If Iran gets the bomb, it will fire on you Tehran's former consul in Oslo, interviewed on Israeli TV, says Islamic regime is 'willing to destroy many countries'

By YIFA YAAKOV January 25, 2013, 11:45 pm

An Iranian diplomat who defected in Norway in 2010 warned Israel on Friday that if the Iranians got the bomb they would use it against the Jewish state.

In an interview with Israel's Channel 2 TV, Mohammad Reza Heydari, the former Iranian consul in Oslo who resigned and obtained political asylum there three years ago, said that "If Iran is given more time, it will acquire the knowledge necessary to build a nuclear bomb within a year." Asked whether it would use the bomb against Israel, he said: "If Iran gets to the point where it has an atomic bomb, it will certainly use it, against Israel or any other [enemy] country."

Heydari — who defected soon after he was asked to identify his son in photos taken during the protests that followed the 2009 vote in which Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad was reelected — said the regime in Tehran was aiming to develop two or three bombs. It saw nuclear weapons as "insurance" to guarantee its survival.

Regime leaders "believe that when they acquire a nuclear bomb, [others] will start to behave toward them as they do toward North Korea," said Heydari. "As a matter of fact, the leading way of thinking in Iran is [devoted to] protecting their own security, and nobody else's," he added.

"They are busying themselves with ideological preparations for the arrival of the hidden Imam and are preparing the ground for that in a practical way; for this purpose, they are willing to spill much blood and destroy many countries."

Heydari, who was previously stationed at Tehran's Imam Khomeini International Airport as the representative of the Iranian Foreign Ministry, said that while he worked there he noticed that Hezbollah groups would come to Iran, acquire knowledge and send it back to Lebanon, under the auspices of the Revolutionary Guards. He said that Hezbollah had contacts with terrorist outfits in Iraq and Afghanistan, as well as the Taliban and al-Qaeda, with which it had close ties.

Heydari, who went on to serve as an Iranian diplomat in Georgia, Germany and finally Norway, said he knew of civilian airplanes from South America arriving with no passengers but with weaponry and material for the nuclear program. He spoke in the interview of uranium purchased for and transported to Iran by Venezuela.

"Venezuela might buy uranium from another country, and after that, send it to Iran by civil flight," Heydari said. He suggested that the uranium was bought from "the mafia."

He also said he had been told when serving as a diplomat to try to recruit western nuclear scientists for large salaries and had personally arranged for dozens of North Korean nuclear personnel to come to Iran. He said Iran used diplomatic mail to import material relating to its nuclear program.

"If the US and Western countries believe Iran belongs to the Axis of Evil, as George Bush said, and that it aids international terrorists, they have to oust this regime," said Heydari. He said that with strong enough sanctions, such as closing all Iranian embassies abroad and preventing Iranian ministers from leaving the country with the threat of their arrests, it would be possible "to help the Iranians." In order to achieve results, he said, Iran must be treated "like the apartheid regime in South Africa."

Heydari described his rise up the Foreign Ministry ranks, saying that he was considered loyal to the regime because he had participated and sustained wounds in the Iran-Iraq war. He said that though he wasn't a religious man himself, he and other government employees had been instructed to "uphold the religious principles," pray several times a day, fast when necessary, grow beards and "dress like Hezbollah men."

He said he gradually began to realize that he was "not alone" — that many other Foreign Ministry employees were only pretending to be religious and ideologically loyal to the regime.

He was posted as consul to Norway in 2008. In 2010, he resigned and has stayed in Oslo since, in a location strictly guarded by the Norwegian authorities.

During the interview, Heydari claimed that five other Iranian diplomats — in Brussels, London, Geneva, Milan and Paris — had defected recently.

The interview was brokered by an Iranian Jewish woman who immigrated to Israel 13 years ago, and arranged it via Norway's security authorities. It took place in an Oslo hotel; Heydari had insisted on a public location, the report said. Heydari acknowledged that his relatives still in Iran have asked him not to speak out publicly, but said he felt the imperative to speak, and had no problem with the interview being screened in Israel

Tehran suspects Mossad in Fordo blast, says Iranian expat White House dismisses report of explosion in nuclear facility; cameras stationed at plant could reveal truth in the coming days

By GREG TEPPER January 28, 2013, 11:55 pm

Iran's underground Fordo nuclear plant was indeed hit by an explosion sometime last week, and Iranian officials suspect the Mossad or CIA as responsible actors, the former Iranian intelligence officer who initially broke the story said Monday.

In an interview with Channel 2 News, Hamidreza Zakeri surmised, however, that an Iranian "internal action" could also have been at play.

Some 240 people were working at the plant at a depth of 90 meters at the time of the incident, according to Zakeri. He said that the two elevators normally available for transfer to the surface are now out of order and it is unknown if workers were hurt or killed in the explosion.

Channel 2's Middle East analyst Ehud Yaari said that the IAEA would know within days if a blast had actually occurred at the plant. According to Yaari, the UN nuclear watchdog has cameras placed at Fordo, which it inspects every seven to 10 days.

The explosion reportedly occurred last Monday, so if Iran doesn't let the IAEA inspectors into the facility in the next two or three days "we'll know something happened," he said.

The White House on Monday dismissed reports that there was a blast at the facility.

"We have no information to confirm the allegations in the report and we do not believe the report is credible," press secretary Jay Carney said. "We don't believe those are credible reports."

Israeli intelligence officials confirmed that a major explosion had rocked an Iranian nuclear facility, The Times of London reported. The British daily on Monday cited officials in Tel Aviv to the effect that the blast had occurred last week, as originally reported on the website wnd.com.

Iran is not believed to have evacuated the area surrounding the Fordo plant, according to the same Israeli sources, who said that an investigation into the blast was ongoing.

"We are still in the preliminary stages of understanding what happened and how significant it is," one Israeli was quoted by the London Times as saying. He did not know if the explosion was "sabotage or accident" and refused to comment on rumors that Israeli aircraft were seen near Fordo at the time of the blast.

On Sunday, Israel's Home Front Defense Minister Avi Dichter welcomed the report of the blast, saying, "Any explosion in Iran that doesn't hurt people but hurts its assets is welcome."

Iran rejects reports of explosion at Fordow nuclear facility

Mon Jan 28, 2013 6:50AM GMT

The false report about the explosion at Fordow [nuclear] installations is the West's propaganda stunt ahead of the nuclear negotiations to influence the trend and the outcome of the talks."

Iranian lawmaker Alaeddin Boroujerdi

Deputy Head of Iran's Atomic Energy Organization (AEOI) Seyyed Shamseddin Barbroudi has categorically rejected Western media reports of an explosion at the country's Fordow nuclear facility.

Barbroudi on Monday dismissed the reports as "sheer lies," reiterating that there has been no explosion at the facility.

Chairman of Iran's Majlis National Security and Foreign Policy Committee Alaeddin Boroujerdi also rejected the reports as a Western campaign to manipulate the talks between Iran and the P5+1 - comprising of Britain, China, France, Russia, and the United States plus Germany.

"The false report about the explosion at Fordow [nuclear] installations is the West's propaganda stunt ahead of the nuclear negotiations to influence the trend and the outcome of the talks."

Iran and the P5+1 group have held several rounds of talks with a focus on Iran's nuclear energy program. The last round of the negotiations was held in Moscow in June 2012.

Tehran has announced that it welcomes the readiness of the six major world powers to hold constructive talks with Iran.

On January 25, European Union deputy foreign policy chief Helga Schmid called for the postponement of the next round of Iran-P5+1 talks to February, saying the six major world powers were not ready to negotiate with the Islamic Republic this month.

The United States, Israel, and some of their allies have repeatedly accused Iran of pursuing non-civilian objectives in its nuclear energy program.

Iran rejects the allegation, arguing that as a committed signatory to the nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT) and a member of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), it is entitled to develop and acquire nuclear technology for peaceful purposes.

In addition, the IAEA has conducted numerous inspections of Iran's nuclear facilities but has never found any evidence showing that the Iranian nuclear program has been diverted to nuclear weapons production.

Israeli sources confirm blast at Iranian nuclear facility

London Times report cites intelligence officials who say Iran hasn't evacuated area around Fordo plant; unclear if explosion was 'sabotage or accident'

By YOEL GOLDMAN and TIMES OF ISRAEL STAFF January 28, 2013, 5:34 am

Israeli intelligence officials have confirmed that a major explosion has rocked an Iranian nuclear facility, according to a report Monday in The Times of London.

The British daily cited officials in Tel Aviv who said the blast occurred last week, as originally reported on the website wnd.com.

Iran is not believed to have evacuated the area surrounding the Fordo plant, according to the same Israeli sources, who said that an investigation into the blast was ongoing.

"We are still in the preliminary stages of understanding what happened and how significant it is," one Israeli official told the London Times. He did not know if the explosion was "sabotage or accident" and refused to comment on reports that Israeli aircraft were seen near Fordo at the time of the blast.

On Sunday, two senior Iranian officials dismissed reports of the explosion. Deputy head of the Iranian Atomic Energy Agency Seyyed Shamseddin Barbroudi said there had been no explosion at the Fordo facility whatsoever, according to the official Islamic Republic News Agency.

The chairman of the Iranian parliament's Committee for Foreign Policy and National Security, Alaeddin Boroujerdi, referred to rumors of the blast as "Western-made propaganda" and said they were "baseless lies" meant to impact ongoing talks on Iran's nuclear program, reported IRNA.

The original wnd.com report published Friday claimed that a blast deep within Fordo last Monday "destroyed much of the installation and trapped about 240 personnel deep underground," citing information from former intelligence officer Hamidreza Zakeri, who it said used to work with the Islamic regime's Ministry of Intelligence and National Security.

The article claimed the blast "shook facilities within a radius of three miles," that Iranian security forces had "enforced a no-traffic radius of 15 miles," that the Tehran-Qom highway was shut down for several hours after the blast, and that, "as of Wednesday afternoon, rescue workers had failed to reach the trapped personnel." It said US officials were aware of the reported blast.

Asked about the incident on Sunday, Home Front Defense Minister Avi Dichter, a former head of Israel's Shin Bet security service, said, "Any explosion in Iran that doesn't hurt people but hurts its assets is welcome." Dichter was acting defense minister Sunday, in the absence of Ehud Barak.

Iran insists its nuclear program is for peaceful purposes, but that claim has been rejected by much of the international community. The Islamic Republic's consistent refusal to allow international inspectors into the Fordo nuclear facility has frustrated Western powers and officials at the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Iran and Argentina agree truth commission for AMIA

TEHRAN, Jan. 28 (MNA) -Islamic Republic of Iran's Foreign Minister says he and his Argentinean counterpart have agreed on the framework for investigating the AMIA case.

On the side line of the African Union Summit in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, Ali Akbar Salehi and Hector Timmerman have made the announcement about AMIA incident; the parties met several occasions, and talked at expert level to agree The Foreign Ministers stressed that the two countries have strongly resolute to find out what the truth is and bring this case to a closure and also stressed on using the assistance of independent legal experts, in their Press release. Salehi and Timerman hoped that the memorandum of understanding for the Truth Commission after the approval by relevant officials of both countries, will achieve complete resolution of this matter. AMIA is one of the lengthiest international court cases, which Argentina was under pressure from Israel to show Iranian involvement, without presenting any single legal evidence.

But Iran has rejected the allegation repeatedly and has blamed Israel for making a false flagged operation in AMIA bombing, with two specific goals in mind;

1. Putting the blame on Iran for the incident, since Iran is against Israeli regime, and also Iranian Jews are living peacefully in Iran with all citizenship rights.

2. Preventing the Israeli Jews from travelling to Argentina, since Palestinian Intifada. Argentina hosts the largest Jewish community in Latin America.

After reports about false flagged operation on 9/11 in New York, which showed Israel's role in the blast, Iran is giving more possibility of an Israeli involvement in the AMIA case.

Iran, Argentina agree to probe 1994 Jewish center bombing

Countries to launch 'truth commission' to investigate Buenos Aires attack in which 85 people were killed

January 27, 2013, 9:38 pm

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentina and Iran reached a breakthrough Sunday in the investigation of a Jewish center bombing that killed 85 people in Buenos Aires 19 years ago, agreeing to establish an independent international "truth commission" led by a jurist "with high moral standing and legal prestige" to examine Argentina's worst terrorist attack.

The commissioners will examine the evidence and recommend how to proceed "based on the laws and regulations of both countries." Then, commissioners and Argentine investigators will travel to Teheran to question the suspects.

"Historic" was how President Cristina Fernandez described the agreement signed Sunday in Africa by foreign ministers Hector Timerman and Ali Akbar Salehi.

A van loaded with fertilizer and fuel oil was exploded on July 18, 1994, leveling the Argentine Israelite Mutual Association building. As with a separate attack that destroyed Israel's embassy in Buenos Aires two years earlier, killing 29, it has never been solved.

Argentine prosecutors have formally accused six Iranians of coordinating the AMIA attack under orders from their government. Among them is Iran's current defense minister, Ahmad Vahidi. The Argentines have spent years seeking to interrogate them with the help of Interpol, but Iran's government has refused until now to make them available.

Previous Argentine probes resulted "only in failures and scandal, with a trial that ended up being a farce" after high-level officials were accused of covering up evidence and deliberately misdirecting investigators, Fernandez said in a series of tweets.

In contrast, this process, which needs legislative approval in both nations, provides a legal framework with due-process rights for the accused that could be a model for conflict resolution, Fernandez said, and it puts the dispute firmly in the hands of legal experts overseen by independent arbitrators.

She called it, "Historic, because never will we allow the AMIA tragedy to be used as a chess piece in a game of faraway geopolitical interests," she tweeted.

Jewish groups, however, made clear their discomfort at Argentina's efforts to improve relations with Iran despite the unresolved bombing case.

"It is a monumental step backward," Luis Czyzewski, who lost his daughter Paola in the bombing, told Argentina's Jewish News Agency on Sunday. "I think all the families will reject it and be as angry as I am." A description of the agreement by Iran's FARS news agency said years of Argentine investigations "have failed to advance the case or prove anything against Iran, indicating that Iran is innocent."

Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad said in October that once "investigations take place in an accurate and impartial manner, then the ground will be prepared for the expansion of ties between Iran and Argentina," the FARS report said.

Iran says new shared oil, gas, reserves discovered

Tue Jan 22, 2013 2:6PM GMT

Iranian Oil Minister Rostam Qasemi says huge oil and gas reserves have been discovered on the country's northeastern and western borders with Turkmenistan and Iraq.

"New studies and exploration activities in Iran indicate the discovery of new oil and gas reserves in areas bordering Turkmenistan and Iraq," Qasemi stated on the sidelines of the Third International Industrial Automation Conference in Tehran on Tuesday. The minister stated that a "huge and considerable" body of gas lies in the northeastern Khangiran district of Khorasan Razavi Province, but the exact volume of the reserves requires further seismic studies and drilling of new wells.

He also confirmed a statement by the Iraqi Oil Ministry on the discovery of a new oil field on the two countries' joint border, saying Tehran will hold talks with Iraqi officials over the newly found shared reserves.

Qasemi noted that over 2 billion barrels of in-situ crude oil reserves have been discovered across the country in the past year.

In December 2012, Iran's deputy oil minister said Iran's proven crude oil and natural gas reserves are worth around $37 trillion. The reserves include 100 billion barrels of crude oil, 94 billion barrels of condensate, and 207 billion barrels equivalent of natural gas, he explained. Iran ranks the third globally in terms of oil reserves while having the world's second-largest natural gas reserves after Russia with 34 trillion cubic meters of natural gas reserves.

Iranian media reveal true colors of Israel, West: Press TV poll

Tue Jan 22, 2013 2:16PM GMT

An overwhelming majority of 72 percent of respondents to a Press TV poll from across the globe say Iran's media are attacked by Zionist lobbies for their revelation of truth about Israel and the West.

Of 11,312 people participating in the online poll, 8,124 believed that Iranian media reveal the true colors of the West and Israel. Only 1,127 (10 percent) maintained that Iranian media spread lies about the Zionist regime and the Western governments, while 2,061 (18 percent) were of the view that Iran's media do not cover the mainstream media's news agenda. Twenty-three percent of the respondents were from the United States, eleven percent from Britain, five percent from Canada and sixty-one percent from other countries. In a clear violation of freedom of speech, European satellite providers Eutelsat, Hotbird and Hispasat have taken Press TV off the air. The Spain's satellite provider took Iran's Press TV and Hispan TV off the air on December 21, 2012 and ordered Overon, a subsidiary satellite company, to stop the transmission of the two international TV channels. Overon's ban on Press TV and Hispan TV followed a similar move by France's Eutelsat company, which had already taken several Iranian satellite channels and radio stations off the air. It said the channels were removed because of "a wider interpretation of EU regulations."

After stopping the broadcast of several Iranian satellite channels, the Eutelsat SA and Intelsat SA cited pressure by the European Union as the main reason behind the decision.

The EU has, however, denied the claims by the European satellite companies.

Military strike will draw stinging response from Iran: Larijani

Tue Jan 22, 2013 6:2PM GMT

Iranian Majlis (parliament) Speaker Ali Larijani has downplayed threats of military action against the Islamic Republic's nuclear facilities, warning of a bitter response to any such attack.

"As the peaceful nuclear (energy) program of the Islamic Republic of Iran has been indigenized, it will not be destroyed by any strike or pressure," Larijani said at a news conference on the sidelines of the 8th General Assembly Meeting of the Islamic Inter-Parliamentary Union (IIPU) in the Sudanese capital, Khartoum, on Tuesday.

"Moreover, the country's response to any possible attack against its nuclear installations will be stinging," he added.

Larijani told reporters that the US-led sanctions against Iran and the pressure imposed on its economy have failed to stop the country from pursuing its nuclear energy program.

The Iranian official further downplayed threats of a military attack by Israel and the United States, and argued, "Since they have a little wisdom [left], they fear Iran's response."

The Majlis speaker also dismissed concerns about a possible radiation crisis at the nuclear power plant in Iran's southern city of Bushehr and assured that the facility meets standards set by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA). The US and Israel have been spearheading a campaign against Iran, accusing Tehran of pursuing non-civilian objectives in its nuclear energy program. The US and its European allies have also imposed sanctions against the Islamic Republic over the unfounded allegation.

Iran has strongly refuted the accusation and argues that as a committed signatory to the nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT) and a member of the IAEA, it is entitled to develop and acquire nuclear technology for peaceful purposes.

Iran to design, produce hi-tech space suits in 8 years: Official

Tue Jan 22, 2013 11:2AM GMTIran will acquire the know-how to design and produce space suits by the next eight years."

Head of Iran's Aerospace Research Institute Mohammed Ebrahimi says the country will acquire the know-how to design and manufacture hi-tech space suits within the next eight years.

"Iran will acquire the know-how to design and produce space suits by the next eight years," Head of Iran's Aerospace Research Institute Mohammed Ebrahimi said on Monday.

Ebrahimi said his organization and Iran's Shiraz University are cooperating closely with each other on the project.

The Iranian official said the production of space suits is a "high-tech" industry which is costly and requires advanced know-how.

In recent years, Iran has made great achievements in the field of aerospace.

On January 17, the director of Iran Space Agency (ISA) Hamid Fazeli said the country will soon send living animals into space aboard a bio-capsule as a prelude to sending humans into space.

Because of the biological similarities between humans and monkeys, the latter were selected for the forthcoming space mission, Fazeli said.

Fazeli further highlighted that the plan to send animals into space is part of a broader project to send human beings on space missions.

In recent years, Iran has made great achievements in the field of aerospace.

Iran launched its first indigenous satellite, Omid (Hope), in 2009. The country also sent its first bio-capsule of living creatures into space in February 2010, using the indigenous Kavoshgar-3 (Explorer-3) carrier.

Moreover, in June 2011, Iran put the 15.3-kilogram Rasad (Observation) orbiter in space. Rasad's mission was to take images of the Earth and transmit them along with telemetry information to the ground stations.

Iran also launched Navid-e Elm-o Sanat (Harbinger of Science and Industry), another indigenous satellite into orbit on February 3, 2012.

Tehran plans to launch the country's first manned mission to space by 2019.

Officials in Indian-administered of a nuclear war.

The Kashmir police published a notice in the Greater

Kashmir newspaper on Monday, advising people to build bomb shelters in basements and to collect enough food and water for two weeks, the Associated Press reported on Tuesday.

Yoginder Kaul, the inspector-general of the civil defense and state disaster response force, stated, "We routinely train and educate people regarding different natural and man-made disasters and that's our duty. This advertisement too was part of such a campaign. Please, let us not read into this beyond that. Let it be clear that this is purely in the nature of educating people and not connected with anything else."

One of the residents of the region said, "This is fueling an atmosphere of fear. Educating people is fine but not this brazen way."

The advisory said people should construct bomb shelters in their yards if they do not have basements large enough to house their families.

"Expect some initial disorientation as the blast wave may blow down and carry away many prominent and familiar features," it added.

The advisory also told residents to keep people contaminated by fallout out of their shelters.

Three Pakistani soldiers and two Indian soldiers have been killed in border clashes in Kashmir since the beginning of 2013.

Kashmir lies at the heart of more than 60 years of hostility between India and Pakistan. Both countries claim the region in full but each

Over the past two decades, the conflict in Kashmir has left over 47,000 people dead by the official count, although other sources say the death toll could be as high as 90,000.

Iran, Russia sign MoU to increase security cooperation

'The signing of the security MoU is a cornerstone in the expansion of cooperation between the two countries.' - Iran's Interior Minister Mostafa Mohammad-Najjar

Tue Jan 22, 2013 11:13AM GMT

The Islamic Republic of Iran and Russia have signed a memorandum of understanding (MoU) to increase security cooperation between the two countries.

Iranian Interior Minister Mostafa Mohammad-Najjar and his Russian counterpart Vladimir Alexandrovich Kolokoltsev signed the MoU during a meeting in Tehran on Tuesday. Heading a political delegation, Kolokoltsev arrived in the Iranian capital on Monday for a two-day official visit upon the invitation of the Iranian interior minister. "The signing of the security MoU is a cornerstone in the expansion of cooperation between the two countries," Mohammad-Najjar said.

The Iranian interior minister added that the good relations between Iran and Russia require that Tehran and Moscow cooperate to provide security for the region.

"Training police forces and providing security in the region were among the main issues of the talks [in Tehran]," Mohammad-Najjar said, adding that various other issues such as the Caspian Sea, fighting organized crimes, and human and drug trafficking had also been discussed in the meeting. Kolokoltsev's visit is the first to Iran by a Russian minister of internal affairs since the victory of the Islamic Revolution in 1979.

Iran's 24th fleet leaves southern port for international waters

Mon Jan 21, 2013 8:17AM GMT
The 24th fleet of Iran's Navy has left a port in the south of the country for international waters to provide maritime security in the region.

The 24th fleet, comprising of Sabalan destroyer and Kharg helicopter carrier, left Iran's Bandar Abbas port on Sunday.

Kharg helicopter carrier is 207 meters long and the largest of its kind in West Asia. The carrier operates as a backup aircraft transport for the Iranian Navy's destroyers in international waters. The deployment is aimed at providing security for the region and ensuring the security of shipping lines.

Iran Navy Commander Rear Admiral Habibollah Sayyari said on January 16 that the 24th fleet would "patrol the north of the Indian Ocean, the Gulf of Aden, Bab-el-Mandeb, the Red Sea, the Suez Canal and the Mediterranean Sea for three months."

In recent years, Iran's Navy has been increasing its presence in international waters to protect naval routes and provide security for Iranian merchant vessels and tankers.

In addition, in line with the international efforts to combat piracy, the Iranian Navy has been conducting anti-piracy patrols in the Gulf of Aden since November 2008 to safeguard the vessels involved in maritime trade, especially the ships and oil tankers owned or leased by Iran.

Meanwhile, Oman's naval vessel Nasr al-Bahr docked at Iran's

Bandar Abbas port along with a helicopter on Sunday.

The development is in line with measures to strengthen the friendly ties between the armed forces of the two neighboring countries.

Sayyari said in February 2012 that the naval forces of a number of neighboring countries had expressed desire to send fleets to Iran and that Tehran was ready to welcome them.

In December 2012, Russian destroyer Marshal Shaposhnikov docked at Bandar Abbas port.

China to begin importing Iranian polyethylene this month: report

China is set to start imports of Iranian-manufactured polyethylene this month, which became possible because the Islamic Republic partially lifted a ban on the export of petrochemicals late last year.

China-based market sources said on Monday that an estimated 100,000-150,000 metric tons of high density polyethylene (HDPE) and low density polyethylene (LDPE) from Iran is expected to arrive in China within a month aboard five vessels, Platts reported.
